French Premier Salutes
Roosevelt as a Guide
Toward Peace of World.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—(UP)—United States Ambassador William Bullitt declared tonight that America's geographical isolation was ended and that the United States is rearming to defend its democratic institutions.

The ambassador spoke at the American Club's Washington birthday banquet in the presence of Premier Edouard Daladier and other members of the French cabinet.

The ambassador said that the protection bestowed on the United States by the Atlantic and Pacific oceans in Washington's day no longer exists.

Growing Apprehension.
"At this moment the minds of Americans are dealing slowly and carefully with important problems," he said. "A growing apprehension that if there should be war in Europe we might be drawn into it is causing much thought at home. Indeed, never in my experience has the discussion of foreign affairs been so widespread or so intelligent. The discussion is thoroughly realistic. Only a negligible number of fanatics are arguing in terms of 'isms.' Americans as a people sustain religion and not religious wars."
"The problem of United States defense today and tomorrow is the subject of the discussion."

Atlantans in Favor Of Eastern Time

"We prefer eastern standard time." This was the consensus expressed yesterday by a representative section of Atlantans interviewed by a Constitution "Inquiring Reporter." The persons questioned were asked to express their opinions on the present proposal that will extend the eastern standard time zone to include the whole of Georgia.

Of those interviewed, a small number said that it did not "make any difference whether we have eastern or central time." All of the others, with only one exception, declared that they preferred eastern standard to central standard time.

This proposed change in time zones, which would set the clock ahead one hour for approximately one-third of Georgia now under central time, has already been approved by the Georgia house of representatives and is now being considered in the senate.

The sole person interviewed yesterday who did not want the change in time was a department store clerk who would not give his name. The clerk said that he preferred central time because "it would be too hard to get up an hour earlier."

Those interviewed in the cross-section poll who were in favor of the change included:

in the open is for an occasional round of golf after work. If Atlanta goes under eastern time, I'll get off an hour earlier and be able to play a lot more than I do."

SAUL SCHACTER, sales manager, of 79 North Pryor street: "Eastern time for whole of Georgia would eliminate a lot of confusion for my salesmen. Now, with the state divided, it is not unusual to get appointments mixed up and lose sales."

JAMES BURNETTE, theater doorman, of 12 Porter place: "Because of the shifts, and split-shifts, that I work it wouldn't make any difference to me whether I was under eastern or central time."

BOOTS MABERY, waitress, of 1091 Birch street: "I'm looking forward to eastern standard time because when I have an early shift I'll get off at the same time by the clock as I do now but I'll have an hour more daylight. Which means an hour more to take sunbaths in the summer and walks in the winter."

MRS. HUGH CHRISTY, housewife, of 576 Capitol avenue: "The baby is a lot easier to take care of in the morning, and if we get eastern time my husband will be home from work an hour earlier in the afternoon to take care of the baby when he isn't so easy to mind."

MISS ARGENIA GORDON, student at Girls' High school, of 1080 East Confederate avenue: "I'm not so sure I understand all that the change will mean. But if eastern standard time will let me stay up an hour later at night, then I certainly am in favor of it."

Especially those whose patients are widely scattered and who must make appointments on both sides of the time meridian. Personally, I'm in favor of the change because it will release me from the office with an hour's more daylight ahead of me."

EDITORS OF STATE ACCLAIM SENATOR AT PRESS SESSION

WEEKLY PAPERS WELL REPRESENTED

Leader in Their Field.

Text of Senator Clark's address will be found on page 10.

By RALPH MCGILL.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—Editors of the state's newspapers met here tonight in their 12th annual Georgia Press Institute. They inaugurated a three-day program with an address tonight by Bennett Champ Clark, United States senator and one seriously considered whenever probable Democratic presidential nominees for 1940 are named.

"The United States constitution could not have been adopted by the states without the bill of rights," Senator Clark told the editors. "Free government is founded on jealousy, not confidence; a right once compromised is likely to be invaded, and once successfully invaded is in danger of being permanently lost."

Balance of Powers.
"Maintenance of the balance of powers granted by the constitution to the federal government and the rights reserved to the states is just as vital now as it was when George Washington retired as President. If political or religious rights of a minority can be invaded, the precedent will have been set for abrogating the rights of a majority."

Senator Clark was the guest yesterday of Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution. Tonight he was the guest of the University of Georgia. In the course of the three-day program the editors will hear outstanding newspapermen, the program being climaxed on Saturday with the appearance of Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, whose uncanny analysis and predictions on political and social subjects have amazed his millions of readers. Dr. Gallup comes as the guest of The Constitution.

On the morrow M. S. Rukeyser, of the International News Service, guest of the Atlanta Georgian, will be heard; as will Douglas McMurtrie, of the Ludlow Typographical Company. On Friday Ham Fisher, cartoonist famed for the creation of Joe Palooka, appears as the guest of The Atlanta Journal. In addition to these there are other speakers and round table discussions on the various topics of journalism in Georgia.

The meeting really belongs to the weekly papers and their editors. The dailies are present with their representatives but it is

Circuit Court Denies Appeal for McCall

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 22.—(AP) Judge Rufus E. Foster, senior judge of the United States fifth circuit court of appeals, late today denied an application for a certificate of probable cause which would have delayed the execution of Franklin Pierce McCall, scheduled to die at Raiford, Fla., Friday for the fatal kidnapping of five-year-old Jimmy Cash.

The certificate would have allowed McCall's counsel an appeal to the Florida supreme court for a review of the case.

E. C. Rutledge, of Jacksonville, made the application.

C. A. Avriett was in Washington seeking a stay of execution and a writ of certiorari from the United States supreme court.

Senator Clark in a Jovial Mood at Institute Session

The camera caught United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark (left), of Missouri, in a jovial mood last night at the dinner opening the 12th annual Georgia Press Institute at the University of Georgia, Athens. Senator Clark was principal speaker. At the right is John E. Drewry, director of the university's Henry W. Grady school of journalism, who presided.

ALABAMAN HELD IN BENNING DEATH

Dairyman Is Accused of Slaying Army Officer Found in Burned Auto.

LAFAYETTE, Ala., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Charles S. Noon, solicitor of the fifth judicial circuit, tonight said a Lee county dairyman had been arrested and charged with murder in the death of First Lieutenant William D. Davis, of Fort Benning, Ga., whose badly charred body was found in his automobile February 12 near Phenix City, Alabama.

Noon said the man was booked as W. Herbert Bush, who lives near the spot where the officer's body was found. The solicitor said a negro employe of Bush also was arrested.

Davis, son of the late Colonel William D. Davis who was decorated for bravery after being killed in France in 1918, was found with his feet on the rear seat of his automobile and his head wedged between the seat and the door. His body was badly charred and identification was established through dental work and a ring.

Officials at Fort Benning issued a statement announcing that Sheriff W. J. Linch, of Opelika, had arrested Bush and charged him with first-degree murder. The Fort Benning statement did not mention arrest of the negro.

Neither Solicitor Noon or army officers advanced a motive for the death of the officer who was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1931.

Lieutenant Davis left his quarters about 10 p. m. Saturday, February 11, telling his wife he was going out for a short time. His automobile was found the next day on a lonely road near Phenix City.

N. Y. Council in Pocketed To Claim Lost Pockbook

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(UP)—John Cashmore, acting chairman, in city council today announced a pocketbook had been found and asked that the owner step forward. There was a stampede of almost the entire members' lip to the rostrum, but Mrs. Genevieve B. Earle established her claim.

Bitter Cold Grips Nation; 20 Degrees Expected Here

Northwest Winds Send Atlanta Thermometers Tumbling Down.

Bitter winds that blew in from the northwest early yesterday and sent Atlanta thermometers tumbling to 22 degrees will push them even lower this morning, the United States Weather Bureau has reported.

A low of 20 degrees has been forecast.

The day will be fair, bureau officials said, and the bright sunshine is expected to bring about a change to warmer by noon. Yesterday's high reading was 33 degrees.

At times reaching a velocity of 36 miles an hour, yesterday's wind drove the cold into middle Georgia, and was expected to reach the coast last night, where killing frosts have been predicted.

The State Department of Agriculture said yesterday that the heavy frost was not expected to hurt south Georgia farmers. About the only thing that has been planted, they reported, was tobacco, and the plants are still covered. The few peach trees that have blossomed will be damaged, but on the whole the weather is expected to retard the blooming season of most of the orchards, and prevent frost damage later in the season.

Foot-Deep Snow, Zero Wave Jams Traffic in Eastern Area.

By The Associated Press.
Snow, piled as deep as a foot at Albany, N. Y., and frigid winds, driving temperatures to near zero in many areas, disrupted traffic in parts of the east yesterday but flood threats in several states were allayed.

The vicinity of Watertown, N. Y., was hard hit by snow and high winds, which extended along the Atlantic coast from New England to the Carolinas. A bus which left Watertown for Sackett Harbor was forced to turn back because of drifted highways. A freight train was marooned in the snow between Watertown and Cape Vincent.

Cold weather extended from the Great Plains and Mississippi Valley eastward to New England and southward to the Gulf of Mexico. Snow fell from New York southward to Asheville, N. C., which had a low of 18 degrees.

Snow blanketed upstate New York, ranging from 4 to 6 inches. The discomforts of Boston residents were increased by both

If Washington Were Alive Now His Own Words Would Refute Pro-Nazi Claim

Letter to Georgia Congregation of Jews in 1789 Gives Views.

The words of George Washington himself refute statements made at a Nazi meeting in New York that, if "Washington were alive today, he would be pro-Nazi."

Washington's thoughts on religious freedom and tolerance were disclosed in a letter sent to the Hebrew Congregation of Savannah in May, 1789, in which he stated, in part:

"I rejoice that a spirit of liberty and philanthropy is much more prevalent than it formerly was among the enlightened nations of the earth, and that your brethren will benefit thereby in proportion as it shall become still more extensive."

The letter, sent to Levi Sheftall, president of Congregation Mickve Israel at Savannah, was disclosed here yesterday by Henry A. Alexander.

ander, prominent Atlanta attorney.

Washington wrote: "I thank you with great sincerity for your congratulations on my appointment to the office, which I have the honor to hold by the unanimous choice of my fellow-citizens, and especially for the expressions, which you are pleased to use in testifying the confidence that is reposed in me by your congregation."

"As the delay, which has naturally intervened between my election and your address, has afforded an opportunity for appreciating the merits of the federal government, and for communicating

11 CUTS EFFECTED AS HOUSE PARES QUARTER OF BILL

Full $75,000 for Governor's Emergency Account Is Preserved Only After Hard Struggle.

NO ESCAPE FROM NEW TAXES—HARRIS

House Sits as Committee of a Whole in Awaiting Down $40,000,000 Bill.

With Speaker Roy V. Harris and numerous other administration leaders joining anti-administrationists and independents in the most forceful of a series of economy waves evidenced during the current session of the general assembly, the house of representatives yesterday began slashing the $40,000,000 general appropriations bill which the house is pledged to finance when completed.

Harris and his group, however, refused to join in an effort to eliminate $75,000 set up as the Governor's emergency account and the fund was preserved intact only after a bitter fight.

Join Opposition.
But the speaker and others normally found in the Rivers camp joined with the opposition in voting to slash the $28,000 set up for State Treasurer George B. Hamilton to $21,073 and to reduce the annual appropriation of the department of law from $40,000 to $30,000.

Harris and his associates sought to prevent a reduction of from $25,000 to $15,000 a year in the appropriation made to Supervisor of Purchases John Lewis but they failed to stem the economy tide, and the slash was ordered. Later some members who led in the fight for the reduction declared that they would ask the house to reconsider the reduction before the bill finally is enacted.

When the house adjourned for the day it was only about one-fourth of the way through the measure.

Cut Auditor.
The auditing department was cut to $60,000 instead of the $70,000 proposed in the budget which compared with $85,000 for last year.

The state library fund was cut from $10,000 to $7,500 and the allotment for printing court reports was trimmed from $12,500 to $10,500.

Here are other items approved in the new bill by the house as a committee of the whole as compared with the old appropriations: Governor's office and executive mansion, $60,000 cut down from $100,000 as at present.

GREENSBORO, Ga., Feb. 22.—R. C. Townsend, member of the local post office staff, has resigned his post as a member of city council, citing a statute which prohibits civil service workers from holding an elective office. He has been a member of city council nearly 12 years.

FILM EXECUTIVES HERE FOR TESTS

Movie Aspirants Will Be Guests at Luncheon Here Today.

By LILLIE MAY ROBINSON.
The gates of Hollywood swung slightly ajar yesterday for many young women and men in the Atlanta area when Actor Bryant Washburn arrived in Atlanta with Arthur Will, R. K. O. casting director, and Ralph Roland, of the R. K. O. organization, bringing the names of those selected by Jesse L. Lasky to represent this territory in the search now being conducted for the most promising new motion picture talent in America. Many of the fortunate applicants will be given auditions in the Dixie ballroom of the Henry Grady hotel between 9 o'clock and noon this morning, preceding a luncheon at which Acting Manager Billie Pratt, of the Fox theater, will be host on behalf of the gateway to Hollywood committee to the 30 who are deemed to have the best prospects for a film career. The luncheon will be held at the hotel at 1 o'clock today. Invitations have been issued to the successful candidates. Washburn expressed great satisfaction at the amount of apparent talent represented in and around Atlanta, and feels very enthusiastic over the prospects of finding real motion picture material among the many applicants for screen tests. Following the luncheon today

DR. HERMAN L. TURNER.

DR. TURNER HEADS CHEST COMMITTEE

Named Chairman of Budget Group of 10 Prominent Atlantans.

Dr. Herman L. Turner, former president and campaign chairman of the Community Chest, was appointed chairman of the budget committee for 1939, heading a group of nine men and one woman who will decide upon appropriations to Chest welfare agencies this year and will work out the proposed budget for next year which will be the basis of the campaign goal to be set for this fall.

The committee was described by Harry Sommers, president of the Chest, as "widely representative of the business, civic and philanthropic interests of Atlanta, which merits the confidence both of the giving public and the agencies through which the public's generous impulses are made effective."

Dr. Turner, committee chairman, is immediate past president of the Chest and is one of the 28 Atlantans who have received the Chamber of Commerce "Certificates of Distinguished Achievement." Dr. Turner's certificate was awarded for his leadership of the 1934 Chest campaign. Bob Jones received the same award for his 1938 campaign leadership.

Alvin B. Cates, president of the Chamber of Commerce and another former Chest campaign chairman, is one of four businessmen on the new budget committee. The others are James W. Lee, commercial manager of the Atlanta Gas Company; J. S. Roberts, advertising manager of the Retail Credit Company, a former national president of the Direct Mail Association and a director of the American Advertising Federation, and Chester L. Emerson, chairman of the Social Planning Council.

George K. Selden, engineer and division superintendent of Southern Bell; Harry Stone, general auditor of Southern Bell; Devereaux F. McClatchey, attorney and Atlanta board of education member; Herman Heyman, attorney, and Mrs. Kenneth L. Quinn complete the committee.

FOR YOU! OVER 1500 BANG UP BARGAINS AS WE CELEBRATE

1859

Founder's Week

It's Founder's Week at A&P. And each year on this occasion we honor our founder—George Huntington Hartford—by giving our customers the greatest array of values at our command. For it was he, who "way back in 1859, made front page news by dealing a sharp blow to the "high living costs of those days." Now? By his far-sightedness in bringing Tea, Coffee and Spices direct from foreign lands to the cupboards of his customers, saving them money by buying direct, by eliminating in-between profits, by lower handling costs, by taking a very small profit for his services.

Today, as back through the years, the homely ideals of this pioneer chain store merchant who believed implicitly in selling fine foods at common sense prices, serve as our creed in our daily relations with the 6,000,000 families who prefer to shop at A&P. Through new and more efficient methods of bringing foods from producer to consumer—shortening the gap, so to speak, from farm and orchard to your pantry (reducing handling costs and distribution expenses at the same time), we are raising living standards and reducing living costs. More families are spending less and getting more good foods because they choose to come to A&P. To you we say: "Come to A&P. Share in this great bargain event—Founder's Week; 1500 bang-up bargains. Big husky savings on everything. Come!"

GRAND JURY BACKS MERGER PROPOSAL

Special Presentments Filed Urging Passage of Constitutional Amendment.

Fulton county grand jury Tuesday endorsed and urged passage of a constitutional amendment permitting the merger of Atlanta and Fulton county governments. Special presentments were filed with Judge Paul S. Etheridge, of Fulton county superior court. They pointed out that the One Government League already has called upon the Fulton delegation to work for the legislation which will remove legal obstacles to consolidation and give the people the right to decide the issue for themselves. "This grand jury believes this community should have the right to merge city and county functions and offices, since other cities and counties of the state have that right. . . . the presentments said in part. "We petition our legislative delegation to pass such legislation as may be necessary to afford our citizens an opportunity to ballot on these vital issues affecting the continued progress and prosperity of our city and county."

John S. McClelland, who has been appointed judge of the newly established division of the criminal court of Fulton county, appeared before the grand jury asking that it rescind its opposition to the court. He was armed with documentary evidence designed to show the need for the added division. No action, however, was taken, it was said.

Not only did the grand jury oppose the court to which McClelland has been appointed, but it also objected to proposed establishment of a new division of the superior court.

BAN ON IMMIGRATION ASKED BY LEGION POST

Immigration to the United States should be forbidden for the next 10 years, or until our present unemployment situation is relieved, the East Point Post No. 51 of the American Legion recommended last night.

In a resolution passed by the post, the work of the Dies committee in investigating un-American activities was approved "100 per cent." Government employment of aliens, "subjects of foreign powers," was hit as a "disgrace and an insult . . . to the American people."

Copies of the resolution were sent to Senator Walter F. George, Senator Richard B. Russell, Congressman Robert Ramspeck, and Representative John D. Wise, chairman of the Dies committee.

HELP 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

To Flush out Acids and Other Poisonous Waste

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 Miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the beginning of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your doctor for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 Miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

14 Rate Experts To Help South

Ramspeck Announces He Now Has Open and Shut Case To Present to the I.C.C. Hearing Tuesday.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—With 14 rate experts from all sections of the country ready to testify that present freight rates in the south are discriminatory, Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Decatur, chairman of the house freight rate bloc, today said he was prepared to present an open and shut case before the committee on interstate and foreign commerce next Tuesday when public hearings on his complaint are held.

Witnesses from the affected areas are E. L. Hart, executive director of the Atlanta Freight Bureau; J. J. Hartnett, chairman of the traffic committee, Omaha (Nebr.) Chamber of Commerce; D. L. Kelley, of the South Dakota public utilities committee; W. H. Fitzpatrick, traffic bureau, St. Joseph, Mo., Chamber of Commerce; J. B. Jones, secretary, southside Virginia; Just Freight Rate Association, Danville, Barr Keshlar, chairman, Iowa State Commerce Commission; C. E. Childs, Omaha; J. C. Murray, traffic manager, Little Rock, Ark., Chamber of Commerce.

Homer J. Conley, commissioner, Fort Smith, Ark., traffic bureau; C. B. Lee, special counsel, Oklahoma Corporation Commission, Oklahoma City; Ernest Thompson, Texas Railroad Commission; E. R. Tanner, traffic manager, El Paso, Texas, Chamber of Commerce, and

ATLANTAN CALLS PARITY BILL 'STRAIT-JACKET' ON RAILS

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Appearing before the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce today, Joseph G. Kerr, of Atlanta, chairman of the Southern Freight Association, testified that the Ramspeck and other bills to erase discriminatory freight rates, if enacted, would be "disastrous" to southern railroads.

"These bills," he said, "would put us in a strait jacket where we could not meet competition. I haven't found a real shipper yet who favors any of these bills." He said the south now had lower rates on some commodities than prevail in eastern rate or official territory and that there was no justification for a change.

Representative Ramspeck said J. A. Little, rate expert, Nebraska Railway Commission.

"All of these experts," Ramspeck said, "have indicated their intention of appearing before the committee."

"I wish to make it plain that as a group we are not committed to any of the half a dozen or more pending bills on freight rate discrimination, and none of the witnesses have been asked to support any of the bills."

"The purpose of the hearing, from the standpoint of our group, which now numbers some 130 members of the house, is to picture the existing situation that we consider is unfair and unjust to the south and west. While certain bills are pending and would be helpful he is not worried by these protests. He believes that when he gets all his expert testimony before the committee next week and it is publicized to both congress and the people at large, the railroads cannot stop a revision of existing rates in non-official territory.

"All we need to do now," he declared, "is to educate the public to the discrimination being practiced by the railroads on the south and other sections of the country. Only the other day I received a letter from a Philadelphia merchant who does business in official rate territory, who bitterly complained about the freight charges he had to pay on raw material from the south. He wants a revision of these rates."

to the sections involved, if a better solution can be found I am sure our group will be willing to support it."

Representative Ramspeck has his own bill, which he has introduced in the last two congresses, which would compel the establishment and maintenance of freight rates from one rate territory to another on the rate per mile that applies within the destination territory.

Today, he received a telegram from a large firm in Indiana, urging him to help defeat his own bill if brought up for consideration. The protestant argued that it would be injurious to transportation interests of Indiana and should be defeated.

JAPANESE DEMAND ACTION AT SHANGHAI

Armed Forces Tighten Pressure on Settlement, Using Terrorism as Lever.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Japanese armed forces tightened their pressure against Shanghai's foreign-controlled areas today by using the terrorism that has swept those areas as a basis for demanding a greater voice in the administration of the International Settlement.

United States marines were subject to emergency call, a common practice, but marine officers denied that leaves had been cancelled.

Japanese marines, said to number 100, took over a part of the Italian defense sector in the northwest corner of the city. Because the area lies outside the permanent Settlement boundaries, however, the action was regarded as not constituting an invasion of the International Settlement itself.

Japanese said that the action was the result of an agreement with Italian officials and was designed to suppress shootings and robberies that occur regularly in the district.

Japanese military and diplomatic authorities opened a campaign to obtain a greater voice in the administration of foreign areas, especially the International Settlement, which is administered by an annually-elected council, now comprising five Britons, two Americans, five Chinese and two Japanese.

Eight Japanese, led by a major general, a rear admiral and the Japanese consul-general, Yoshiaki Miura, called upon Cornell S. Franklin, American chairman of the council, with a "request for the council's assent to the adoption of effective measures to cope with the present situation."

(Japanese Foreign Minister Hachiro Arata instructed Miura to present a virtual ultimatum to the council demanding that the terrorism be stopped immediately. The Tokyo newspaper Asahi said Japan demanded the prompt arrest of terrorists, greater representation on the council, and reorganization of the International Settlement.)

REFUGEES ARRIVE AT YANGTZE PORT SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The United States gunboat Oahu to-night reported eight Americans and 35 other foreigners had been brought safely through Chinese and Japanese battle lines from Kiangsi to the Yangtze river port of Kiangsi.

(Roy Algood, of Birmingham, Ala., was among them.) A message from the gunboat said the refugees, who were isolated for months at the mountain-top resort while Chinese-Japanese warfare threatened to engulf them, would arrive in Shanghai Thursday aboard a Japanese ship.

'George' and 'Martha' at Agnes Scott Costume Ball

FATHER BURNS GIRL FOR BUYING SHOES

Turns Blow Torch on Her Face, Bars Doctor for 2 Days.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 22.—(AP) While his pretty 16-year-old daughter was treated for burns at City hospital, Rosario Peschard, a welder, was held in jail tonight accused of turning a flaming blowtorch on her because she sued part of her meager laundry wages to buy shoes.

Mrs. Peschard filed a charge of aggravated assault against her husband. Speaking in Spanish, she sobbed:

"Don't let him come back. I am afraid. My children are afraid." Cristina, the daughter, told County Attorney David E. Mulcahy she always took her $6 wages earned in a laundry to her father, but on February 11 she used a bit of overtime money to buy herself a pair of shoes.

"He asked me where I got them," she told Mulcahy. "I told him a friend gave them to me. He was very angry. He told me I lied. He was working with the torch. All at once he turned it on my face. My whole face was on fire. It was all white and red, it was awful."

Not until two days later, Mulcahy said, did Mrs. Peschard slip from the house and get a doctor for the girl, who was ordered to stay inside by her father. There are six other children at the Peschard home.

TAX RECOMMENDATION. HINESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 22.—(AP) The Liberty County Teachers' Association, meeting at Dorchester yesterday, went on record as favoring taxation that would make possible the continuation of the educational program in the state.

HONOR WASHINGTON AT VALLEY FORGE

Patriotic Groups Pledge To Keep America Land of Free.

VALLEY FORGE, Pa., Feb. 22.—(AP)—On snow-powdered hills where General Washington and his tattered continentals endured a winter of hardship in winning American independence, patriotic organizations pledged themselves anew today to keep America the land of the free.

Honoring the nation's first President on the 20th anniversary of his birth, thousands came to lay wreaths at his statue and hear his doctrines extolled as the essence of American democracy.

Joining the pilgrimage to the historic fields—now a state park—were some members of the Communist party who hailed Washington as "father of the American Revolution."

GALLUP TO SPEAK TOMORROW NIGHT

Institute Director To Address C. of C. Here.

Dr. George H. Gallup, founder and director of the American Institute of Public Opinion whose uncanny forecasts of public sentiment have won him national acclaim, will be principal speaker at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night at a forum dinner sponsored by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

He also will address the twelfth annual session of the Georgia Press Institute Saturday at Athens as the guest of The Constitution. Reservations should be made through the Chamber of Commerce by telephoning Walnut 0845, or by mail, Granger Hansell, chairman, announced.

DEEP SNOW, ZERO WEATHER IN EAST

snow and sleet. A blinding snow was blamed for the death of Mrs. Mary Brown, of Canandaigua, N. Y., at Rochester. Her neck was broken in an automobile collision.

Chicago and Pittsburgh also reported snow.

Skidding temperatures brought a recession in streams throughout New York, including a fall to 13.12 inches from 14.58 inches 24 hours previously in the Susquehanna at Binghamton.

Flood Peril Allevied.

Colder weather and snow in central Pennsylvania also checked the Susquehanna and allayed flood threats to a dozen towns. At Plymouth, Pa., families fled 14 homes or climbed to upper stories. Cellars were flooded in Kingston. Dikes prevented more widespread damage.

The Ohio, Cumberland and Tennessee rivers receded above Paducah, Ky. The weather was clear and cold throughout the valleys. Forty families have been removed from inundated sections of Paducah, where the Ohio river was expected to start falling also.

Texas received some relief from its coldest wave of the season, but frost extended as far south as Corpus Christi. The Rio Grande valley apparently escaped damage to crops.

Presbyterians of Two Branches Discuss Unification of Churches

'Southern' and 'Northern' Groups With Joint Membership of 2,500,000, Discuss Merger in Meeting Held in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Leaders of the "Southern" and "Northern" Presbyterian churches began discussions here today looking toward a union.

"We feel confident that something definite will grow out of these discussions," commented the Rev. E. C. Scott, of Dallas, Texas, executive secretary of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States (Southern).

Mr. Scott and others participating in the discussions declined further comment, explaining that reports must be submitted to full committees and to the general assemblies of the two groups before being made public.

In addition to Mr. Scott, representatives of the "Southern" church include the Rev. Thomas W. Currie, Austin, Texas, president of Austin Theological Seminary; the Rev. Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, New Orleans; Colonel Willis M. Everett, Atlanta; the Rev. E. T.

Wellford, Newport News, Va.; the Rev. Frank H. Caldwell, president of the Louisville Theological Seminary, which is under the joint control of the two churches, and Judge P. F. Henderson, Aiken, South Carolina.

Representing the Presbyterian church in the United States of America (Northern) were the Rev. J. Ross Stevenson, Princeton, N. J.; the Rev. William Barrow Pugh, Philadelphia; the Rev. Lewis Seymour Mudge, Philadelphia; the Rev. Joseph A. Vance, Detroit; the Rev. Ralph Waldo Lloyd, Nashville, Tenn.; the Rev. Charles W. Welch, Louisville, and Dr. Robert E. Speer, Lakeville, Conn.

The "Northern" and "Southern" churches were described as having the largest number of members among the several Presbyterian churches in America. The "Southern" church has a communicant membership of about 500,000, the "Northern" church about 2,000,000.

CIVITANS SUPPORT
VENEREAL BATTLEApprove Pre-Marital Test
Bill Before Legislature.

Entering actively in the fight against venereal disease, the Atlanta Civitan Club yesterday announced that it had passed two resolutions on the subject. Oby T.

Brewer, president, made the announcement for the club. First resolution passed by the club at their Tuesday meeting was in support of the pending bill in the state legislature which would require all applicants for marriage licenses to furnish evidence that they were free from venereal disease in a contagious state. Other resolution concerned the refusal of local radio stations to carry educational programs on venereal disease. The club petitioned WSB, WGST, WATL and WAGA to allow programs designed to educate the public on the prevention and cure of venereal disease.

'Torpedo' SOS Mystifies

Two Continents Electrified by Message; Ships Rush to Position, But Can Find No Trace.

CHATHAM, Mass., Feb. 22.—(AP) Government officials and shipping men of two continents tonight struggled feverishly to solve the mystery of an electrifying SOS from an unnamed vessel, which reported she had been torpedoed and was sinking 360 miles south of the Azores.

Radiomen pondered the possibility it might have been a British oil tanker.

"Have been torpedoed by unknown submarine. Hole below water line. Sinking. Urgent!"—was the radioteletype message picked up by the radiomarine station here and by the Portuguese navy department at Lisbon, Portugal.

It was signed with the unlisted call letters "PECC."

While efforts to identify the sinking vessel were unavailing, radiomen pointed out that the letter "C" in international code was the same as "ten" and pondered the possibility that the "PECC" might stand for "Pecten."

London advices reported a British oil tanker Pecten left Trinidad February 8 and was due in Southampton, England, next Monday. The Pecten was last reported in the vicinity of the position given in the SOS.

Efforts to reach the Pecten by wireless were unavailing, but radiomen pointed out that probably only one radio operator was aboard and he might have been asleep.

Shipping authorities at Horta, the Azores, said officers of a vessel that arrived there last Friday reported sighting two submarines of unidentified nationality south of Fayal island, in the general area from which the SOS emanated.

The British vessel Empress of Australia, arriving at the position given in the message, radioted she had sighted neither the vessel nor any wreckage. Later, she advised she was proceeding and turned over the search to the Greek steamer Mount Pelion, which reported she was near the "PECC" position and was making rapid headway under forced draft.

Meanwhile, Portuguese naval authorities said they had not dispatched rescue ships from the Azores because they believed other shipping was much nearer.

Because the SOS was not repeated, radio officials expressed the view that if the call was genuine the torpedoed vessel had plunged to the bottom.

The SOS gave a latitude and longitude that would have placed the vessel less than 1,000 miles from the coast of Africa, and almost due south of the Azores. This route would be followed by a vessel bound from the Mediterranean to the Panama canal, but would have placed the ship far to the west of the area where the submarines of Spanish General Francisco Franco have been operating, and far to the east of the area where the United States fleet is engaged in war games.

Also mysterious were the letters "PECC," which are not now assigned to any vessel, that a wide range of conjecture was stirred among United States navy, coast guard and commercial communications and shipping officials. One speculation was that the call, if genuine, sought to hide the true colors and destination of the distressed vessel.

Captain Thomas Shanley, commandant of the Boston coast guard district, immediately pointed out that unauthorized use of code letters would be "clearly contrary to the international agreement."

Simultaneously a federal communications official raised the possibility the letters might have been garbled in the hurried sending of the SOS.

United States officials reported the letters "PECC" ordinarily would be assigned to a Dutch vessel, but that if the letters following in the alphabet than "ECC" a vessel of Italian or Spanish registry might be involved.

As late as 1936 the letters were used as the code designation of the 10,000-ton Dutch steamer Flinders, but in that same year the vessel was sold to a French firm and now is known as the Bretagne, with the call letters "FNSB." The vessel was listed most recently as tied up at St. Nazaire, France.

The message from the Texas Banker, directed to the United States coast guard station in Mobile, Ala., was intercepted by the coast guard radio station here.

"S. S. Texas Banker fire under control," the message, received at 7:30 p. m. (Atlanta time) said. "No assistance necessary."

The Norwegian tanker Alexander Hoegh, only a few miles away and proceeding to aid the Texas Banker under forced draft, turned back to its course.

Two coast guard cutters dispatched to aid the Texas Banker, after it had sent an urgent message and an SOS, were ordered to return to port.

More than 100,000 acres of tung trees were under cultivation early in 1939 on the gulf coast from Florida to Texas for the production of oil used mainly in making paint.

FULTON'S BUDGET
SLASHED $20,000Commissioners Order List of Every County Employee;
Plan to Prune It.

Fulton county commissioners late yesterday slashed approximately $20,000 from the $100,000 annual fuel and automobile mileage accounts and set machinery in motion to further prune the county budget.

Practically all mileage accounts were cut about 30 per cent, and A. A. Clarke, superintendent of public works, was asked to provide the officials with a list of every departmental employee, age occupation, the length of time he has been employed and other data.

When the catalogue is completed, commissioners will be called into session by Chairman Ed L. Almand and a determined effort to cull any "unnecessary or non-essential employees" will be made, it was said.

The Fulton county label, which has been carried on all county-owned cars, will be taken from those operated in the police, solicitor general's, municipal court, sheriff's and juvenile court departments, under an order passed by the commissioners. Law enforcement departments, included in those listed, informed commissioners that their labels have proven to be a handicap in the apprehension of criminals.

Unanimous approval was given to the budget bill, which was prepared by County Attorney Walter C. Hendrix in collaboration with Marion Smith, attorney for the Atlanta Clearing House Association.

The grand jury has insisted that county finances be operated under a strict budget law, and commissioners have given the proposal their approval.

Commissioners last night said they propose to "go through the departments with a fine tooth comb to weed out any unnecessary employees and to effect savings wherever possible."

GEORGIANS TO PICK ART FOR EXHIBITION

Judging of Works Scheduled in Five Cities.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P)—Paintings and sculpture which will represent Georgia in the National Exhibition of American Art in New York will be chosen by competitive judging in five cities.

Preliminary judging will be done in Augusta, Atlanta, Columbus, Athens and Savannah. Five works will be selected by the judges in each of these cities except Columbus, where 10 will be chosen because artists from the Macon area also will show at Columbus.

These works will be sent to Athens for final selection of those that will go to the national exhibition, opening April 17 in the Associated Press building in New York.

Lamar Dodd, head of the University of Georgia Art Department, is chairman of the Georgia committee on the show. The committee members in each city are: Columbus, Edward Shorter; Savannah, Chris Murphy Jr.; and Alice Cabanis; Augusta, Mrs. Henry Wright; Athens, Sally Goodwin and Jean Flanigan; Atlanta, L. P. Skidmore, Mrs. Marjorie Bush-Brown, Julian Harris and George Ramey.

2 GEORGIA PAPERS WIN $128 U. S. AD CLAIMS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—Two Georgia newspapers have received senate approval of their claims, aggregating $128, against the government for advertising they had done for the Resettlement Administration in 1936. The bill called for payment of $32 to the Fitzgerald Leader and $96 to the Ocilla Star. The general accounting office had withheld preaudits of vouchers, preliminary to approval of the payments, on the ground no specific instructions were made by the chief of the Resettlement Administration. The bills now go to the house.

RIGHT-OF-WAY STAKED FOR NEW POWER LINE

REIDSVILLE, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P)—Staking of the right-of-way for the construction of 269 miles of rural electric lines to supply residents of Tattnall, Evans, Liberty and Long counties was begun yesterday by the Canoochee Electric Membership Corporation. Erection of the lines will begin about March 6, and is to be completed within 150 calendar days at an approximate cost of $150,000.

Subcommittee Opposes Tax on Gross Incomes

Representative Alexis A. Marshall, of Macon county, announced yesterday the house subcommittee of the ways and means committee of which he is chairman, had voted to report unfavorably a proposed 1 per cent gross income tax.

Marshall, himself vigorously opposed to the measure which was one method suggested by Governor Rivers for raising $8,500,000 additional revenue he estimated would be necessary to finance his program, reported all members of the subcommittee opposed the tax. Others on the committee group are Representatives Grice, of Bibb; Trippie, of Polk; Fowler, of Douglas; and Hill, of Screven.

The tax proposal resulted in a flood of opposition from businessmen and organizations over the state.

For fear of propaganda from near-by Russia, stations, short-wave radios are not permitted the general public in Japan.

Baldness Starts at These Three Points

HEED THESE WARNINGS

When your hair begins to recede at the (1) temples, (2) crown, or (3) frontal, Nature is painfully warning you that some serious scalp ailment is attacking your hair, and baldness is surely approaching. Feed these positive warnings and let the Thomas' save your hair with their reliable proved scalp treatment.

BALDNESS is not caused by sleeping in short beds or damp churches. Nor is it inherited. More than 85% of all cases of baldness are caused by one or more of the 14 local scalp disorders which come within the scope of Thomas treatment. Therefore, there is really no reason why you should become bald or remain bald.

Thomas treatment effectively overcomes the causes of baldness, ends dandruff, stops abnormal hairfall and promotes hair growth quickly and inexpensively. You have nothing to do at home, nothing to worry about. A Thomas expert determines exactly which scalp disorders are attacking your hair-growing structure, eliminates them, and stimulates hair growth. Call today at a Thomas office for a complete scalp examination. It costs you nothing and you are not obligated in any way.

CITIZENS' BODY ASKS WELFARE EXPANSION

Pledges Word Against Curtailment of Board's Activities

After congratulating Governor Rivers for his establishment and direction of the State Department of Public Welfare, the State Citizens' Committee yesterday pledged itself to work for expansion, and against curtailment of the department's activities.

The move came a day after 24 persons had been lopped from the department's payroll, which, with salary cuts on others effected an estimated saving to the state of $98,791.

Meeting in the assembly rooms of the Chamber of Commerce the committee held that services performed by "adequate, trained and experienced" personnel is the best and wisest economy possible.

"Instead of curtailment we believe the program begun so well should be carried through and made more nearly equal to the needs that compelled its creation," the resolution read. "To the realization of this end we pledge our support and co-operation and shall continue our active interest in the further progress and development of public welfare in Georgia."

The statement was signed by Comer Woodward, chairman; Mrs. L. O. Turner, president, Georgia Federated Church Women; J. R. McCain, president, Agnes Scott College; Josephine Wilkins, president Georgia League of Women Voters; Fred F. Athern, president, Georgia Conference on Social Work; and Dr. Jesse Farr, chairman child welfare committee, American Legion.

SOCIAL WORKERS' UNIT PROTESTS WELFARE SLASH

The Georgia chapter of the American Association of Social Workers yesterday joined with other organizations in protesting against any action in the name of economy which would seriously handicap and jeopardize the essential program of welfare services for the needy in Georgia.

"No personnel can render an economical administration of welfare services without competent supervision, which we regard as essential to the program of public welfare in Georgia," the chapter stated in a formal resolution signed by Angela Cox, chairman of the resolution committee.

ASKS WHAT GENE ATE TO COST $14.10

What kind of a meal can one get for $14.10?

H. B. (Hell Bent) Edwards, of Lowndes county, would like to know. He charged yesterday that Eugene Talmadge while Governor managed to down such a meal and put it on his expense account.

"What in the hell he ate for $14.10," said Edwards, "I cannot imagine."

He asserted the former Governor "managed to ride in an automobile and on a train at the same time," as he discussed Talmadge's expense account.

40 MILLION BUDGET CUT ITEM BY ITEM

From $35,000. Expenses of the various examining boards and the securities commission were fixed at 80 per cent of fees collected instead of 97 per cent as at present.

Comptroller general's office, $50,000, cut from $90,000, plus fees for fire inspection.

Supreme court expenses, $32,000, cut from $87,000.

Expenses of the general assembly, $50,000 instead of $225,000 for last year.

To this item was added another $250,000 for legislative expenses in 1941, (next scheduled session). Appropriations in the present budget bill for legislative expense and the cost of publishing legislative proceedings and advertising constitutional amendments total $625,000.

Sticks by 20 Per Cent

The $40,000,000 bill was taken up after Speaker Harris had taken the floor to inform the house that he planned to continue his fight for a straight 20 per cent reduction, which Governor Rivers opposes, and Representative James V. Carmichael, of Cobb, vice chairman of the house economy committee, told the house that he would vote for no appropriations or no new taxes until the economy committee had finished its work.

Carmichael told the house he favored completion of the economy program during the present session and an extra session before the start of the new fiscal year, July 1, to make appropriations and provide necessary taxes to pay the appropriations.

Harris disagreed with the Cobb

Georgia's Azaleas Ignore Wintry Blasts to the North

While wintry winds blow elsewhere, it's spring down in south Georgia, where gorgeous azaleas are in full bloom. Pictured here amid the azalea blossoms at Valdosta are four Georgia State Woman's College students. Left to right are Louise Bell, Arlington; Leah Yarborough, Albany; Mary Frances Burke, Valdosta, and Opal Brown, Brunswick.

Representative regarding the extra session and declared in his belief that there would be none. Chairman Henderson Lanham, of the ways and means committee, a powerful independent member of the house, then urged the assembly to proceed with the appropriation bill. It was called up by Chairman William H. Key.

Representatives W. H. Lovett, of Laurens; H. B. Edwards, of Lowndes; J. Wesley Culpepper, of Fayette; and Harley Jones, of Brantley county, led the fight for budget reductions, opening up on the second item proposed in the bill, the $25,000 set up for the supervision of purchases.

Representative Lovett offered an amendment to reduce this fund to $15,000 and it was approved after being opposed by Chairman Key and Speaker Harris.

The third item on the budget was the $75,000 set up for the Governor's contingency fund.

Difficult Maneuver

Representative Culpepper offered an amendment to eliminate the fund while Representative Lovett submitted two proposals, the first to fix it at $50,000 and the second to cut it to $25,000. The house defeated the Lovett proposals and then voted 63 to 61 to pass the Culpepper amendment. Speaker Harris, who was on the floor while Representative Frank Gross, of Stephens county, presided, leaped to his feet and asked for a reconsideration. The reconsideration was voted and the amendment defeated. A new reconsideration was obtained but the amendment carried by a vote of 70 to 65.

Several members then made an effort to obtain a reconsideration of the Lovett amendments but the rules prevented a new vote being taken. However, Representative Wohlwend, of Muscogee, indicated he would submit one before final enactment. The measure was before the house as a committee of the whole yesterday and will be taken up by the house itself later.

Candler Fights Cut

Representative Jones and Representative H. G. Bell, of Grady county, sought to reduce the appropriation for the office of Secretary of State John B. Wilson below the $31,500 fixed by the committee, but a group, headed by Representative Murphy Candler, of DeKalb, succeeded in keeping it at the established figure.

Representative Preston Rawlins, of Telfair county, led the fight to reduce the $26,000 appropriation fixed by the committee for State Treasurer George B. Hamilton's office. Rawlins read from the auditor's report to show that salaries for the office totaled $21,073, and asked that this amount be fixed in the bill. He attacked the item for a $1,300 travel account and charged that he should not be permitted to leave his office on trips.

No Escape

The suggestion to postpone appropriations until June in the interest of economy met a prompt counter-attack by Speaker Harris, who asserted "I think we can go ahead now as intelligently as we can two months from now." The speaker added: "I don't think there is any escape from new taxes—it's a question of how far we want to go."

His statement followed a claim by Representative Carmichael that all state departments could be financed without new taxes and "without being crippled."

Carmichael read statements attributed to Governor Rivers in campaign speeches to support his argument against new taxes, and shouted: "I'll not vote for any taxes until I see how much we can save."

Quotes Constitution

In one of these, made August 11, 1936, at Ellijay, he quoted the Governor from a story in The Constitution as saying: "We feel we can set up a fund to take care of our old people without levying an additional dime in taxes."

He was quoted in the Atlanta Journal, July 26, 1936, as saying at Newnan: "Answering the repeated charges that he was strongly in favor of a sales tax, Rivers stated that when an emergency of 1932 was acute, such a tax was perhaps necessary; but now, through the wonderful recuperation of the nation, including Georgia, as a result of the Roosevelt policies, such a tax was unnecessary, and under good government would never be."

Carmichael referred to the Governor's recent tax message to the general assembly. "The Governor called upon us then to have courage to make tax revisions. We have the courage to make revisions but I charge that under the guise of revision he wants addition."

Carmichael contended that "the question has not been approved by the people and in my opinion they would not approve it (new taxes) if it were submitted to them. . . . I am willing to submit the question of increased taxes to the people but I will not be a party to hiking taxes without giving the people the right to pass on this question as a square cut issue."

Mentioning the work of the economy committee, Carmichael said: "What in God's name is the use to economize, why investigate, if you are going to appropriate the money anyway and then let the departments spend it?"

He asserted that passing the appropriations bill at this time "would absolutely stop this business of economy."

Carmichael said that in 1924 there were $5,972,769.72 of allocated funds collected as compared with $27,181,278.42 in 1938. In 1924, he went on, unallocated funds amounted to around $10,000,000 and in 1938 around $12,500,000.

"Yet," he said, "the schools are about to close; the insane people at Milledgeville are not being properly cared for. If we raise the additional revenue? Are the schools going to get it? Every school since the legislature has been in session they have been talking about the teachers, the insane and poor folks."

He blamed the system of allocations to some departments and appropriations to others for many of the difficulties of the school and health departments.

"Ridiculous Situation"

"Every time revenue falls short of anticipations," he said, "the suffer are the schools and the eleemosynary institutions. Those departments that live off allocations are not curtailed at all and the political debts are paid in full. This is a ridiculous situation."

Carmichael said by fixed sum appropriations to those agencies now maintained by allocated funds, all agencies would receive a 20 per cent reduction rather than "schools, health, pensions and a few others receiving a 44 per cent reduction as they now are."

"Would not this be fair? Would not this be just?"

The youthful legislator from Cobb asserted, "Let's put everybody on the same footing. If we could save $2,000,000, and we can save it, for the economy committee has barely scratched the surface, that would reduce the need for an over-all reduction in appropriations and allocations if all departments were put on appropriations, to only 13 per cent. All these departments could stand a 13 per cent cut without being crippled."

Harris Defends Rivers

Harris defended Governor Rivers' tax statements which were attacked by Carmichael, asserting that conditions had changed materially since 1936 and when these statements were made. Harris said he wanted it understood he had not weakened in regard to carrying through the state's program support of the schools and its eleemosynary institutions in his suggestion for a 20 per cent slash.

"But I think it is better to put these departments on an 18 per cent basis and then pay them in full rather than appropriate 100 per cent and then pay only 55 per cent of the appropriations," he added. "The Welfare Department, the schools and the Health Department and absolutely essential departments of the state government are the ones that will suffer."

He said if the appropriations stands at $21,000,000 for the appropriated departments, he didn't believe it could be financed without a general sales tax. He added, however, he felt it could be financed by some other means if a 20 per cent cut were made.

Fears Loss From U. S.

He explained that in advocating a 20 per cent reduction in the money bills except for the Highway Department funds he was afraid any cut in the Highway Department allocation might jeopardize Georgia's federal aid for roads. Four cents of the state's 6-cent tax goes to highways, 1 cent to schools and 1 cent to counties.

Harris said he had agreed to join with Lanham on a substitute bill which would put all state departments on appropriations but he felt that any such measure must include a definite fixed sum for the Highway Department. Lanham said he would agree to elimination of the reduction clause with reference to the Highway Department to avoid jeopardizing federal funds.

Lanham's Defense

Representative Lanham started off with a defense of Governor Rivers and his program and criticism of what he termed "misleading" statements of anti-tax groups.

"We must face the situation as it stands today," he said. "The gentleman from Cobb county and others who agree with him have been telling the people that the program can be financed without additional taxation. This is a misleading statement because it is utterly impossible to finance the program in full unless we have more revenue."

"Don't Kid Ourselves"

"If we don't want to finance it completely, then let's cut the program down to fit our revenues. But let's not kid ourselves into believing we can do the whole job with our present revenues. If we abolished all departments in the state capital, we could save only $1,500,000 per year and that would not be enough to make up the deficit."

"Only about $390,000 of savings have been recommended by the economy committee and that is only a drop in the bucket. The committee saves another $1,000,000 can be saved in school operations, but even that would not be enough."

Turning briefly to the matter of wasteful spending in governmental affairs, the Floyd county legislator said there is "waste and extravagance" in the state, county and municipal governments.

"Topheavy Organization"

"I know there has been waste and extravagance in the state government," he said, "but it is not entirely the fault of the Governor. We are partly responsible, for almost all of us have been up there at one time or another trying to get somebody on the public pay roll. Year by year an organization has been built up that has grown topheavy and this is the situation we must face now."

Other Business

Other legislative business yesterday, in brief: The senate approved, 36 to 8, a constitutional amendment providing for annual sessions of the legislature. If approved by the house, the proposal would be submitted to the people for ratification.

The house passed, 148 to 7, a bill to place money from automobile license tags in a fund for the post roads division of the State Highway Department. Author Frank Gross, of Stephens, estimated this would amount to about $1,500,000 yearly, which would be augmented by federal funds for post roads work.

The house completed legislative action on a bill providing that members of the Public Service Commission can be removed only by impeachment by the legislature. The bill was signed last night by the Governor.

The senate was on record as favoring the full financing of the state's seven-month public school program. Senator Adie N. Durden, of Albany, said he objected to a press report that the house had passed a similar bill while the senate "shelved" such a proposal. It was explained yesterday's resolution was sent to a committee and not tabled. A substitute resolution, approved today, was worded so that it did not give specific direction as to how the schools should be financed.

Interest Hike Sought

Representative David Atkinson, of Chatham, proposed restoration of the 3 1-2 per cent a month interest rate on small loans instead of the present rate of 1 1-2 per cent, and the placing of salary buyers as well as small loan firms under jurisdiction of the state superintendent of banks.

The house approved a measure permitting the State Highway Board to issue $8,976,829 in refunding bonds over the next three years, the proceeds to be used to retire county certificates for money spent on the state highway system.

Payment of these certificates, aggregating $28,000,000 now is spread over a 10-year period ending in 1945. By issuing the bonds, the refunding would be extended to 1948, releasing current highway funds for matching with federal road funds.

Senate Committee Okays Arms Program

Bill To Be Brought To Vote Next Week; House Vociferously Debates Guam Base Proposal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—A bill embodying most of President Roosevelt's big rearmament program received the unanimous approval of the senate military committee today, while the house engaged in a vociferous debate on the advisability of expanding naval facilities on the island of Guam.

Specifically, the committee endorsed a $358,000,000 expenditure to increase the army's warplanes to a total of 8,000 to augment the air corps' personnel, to strengthen the defenses of the Panama Canal, and to school American industry in the production of war supplies by the placement of educational orders.

It disregarded, however, a request of Secretary of War Woodring for removal of all stated limits.

SIX-MILE BALLOON DEFENSE PROTECTING GERMAN PLANTS

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—(P)—A network of balloons on cables in close rows to trap attacking airplanes has been added to the anti-aircraft protection of German cities and industrial regions.

Enough balloons are now on hand, first reports of the new defense system said today, to surround all of Germany's more vital industrial regions. The first unit was set up for possible use during the Czechoslovak crisis last September, when the Leuna artificial gasoline factory near Leipzig was outwitted with a balloon blockade.

German experts asserted that once an airplane strikes one of the balloons it must come down, and if the cables gets entangled with a propeller an airplane motor sometimes is ripped out. The system is said to be so simple that civilians can operate it.

One motor truck is assigned to two balloons, which form a unit. The balloons can be inflated and sent aloft within a few minutes. Experts said they are meant to form a permanent anti-aircraft protection which guns can not give.

The British originated the balloon defense scheme, but the German balloons were said to differ from the British in shape. The German ones are more like a small blimp. One authority said they could be sent up as high as six miles.

F.D.R.'s Warship Radios Message On 'Sharp Clash'

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—(P)—Contenting fleets have fought several sharp engagements in the south Atlantic war games testing the American defenses against the theoretical attack from Europe, said a radio message today from President Roosevelt's review ship, the cruiser Houston.

"Contacts between scattered light forces have been numerous out in the Atlantic ocean well to the eastward of the West Indies."

The message, signed by Captain Daniel J. Callaghan, the President's chief naval aide, added that the Houston was "proceeding leisurely toward the theater of fleet operations."

This was the fourth day of the President's 10-day voyage. He told reporters before he embarked Saturday he may have to cut the trip short because of disturbing reports from abroad.

FRENCH OFFICERS IN AFRICA CONFER

Reports of Serious Armed Clash on Tunisian Border Persist.

ALGIERS, Algeria, Feb. 22.—(P)—Chiefs of France's armed forces in Africa met today following upon reinforcement of Italian troops in Libya.

General August Nogues, co-ordinator of French African forces which number some 100,000 men, planned to fly to Paris immediately after the meeting to report directly to Premier Daladier.

The urgent meeting followed hard on the heels of persistent reports of a bloody clash between French and Italian troops in southeastern Tunisia. Although both the French resident general, Erik Labonne, and the Italian consulate general in Tunis denied that any clash had occurred, the military conference was considered highly significant.

(Reports received in Paris by diplomatic circles and through private channels from Tunis said 80 Italians and four Frenchmen were killed last Friday on the Tunisia-Libyan border when Italian troops penetrated French territory from Libya and were driven back.)

Other border incidents had been reported in recent weeks, but none was confirmed officially. One was that an Italian airplane had been shot down by French anti-aircraft gunners when it flew over Tunisian territory.

Among the army and air corps leaders conferring with Nogues was General Amedee Blanc, commander of French troops in Tunisia. Reinforcement of the 35,000 French troops in Tunisia with troops from Algeria and Morocco was said to be under consideration.

While the meeting was in session, the chamber of deputies army committee met in Paris.

CHAMBERLAIN USES VERSE AS WARNING

Quotes Shakespeare on British War Might for Defense.

BLACKBURN, England, Feb. 22.—(P)—Prime Minister Chamberlain, using Shakespearean verse to express his confidence, tonight offered to win Germany's friendship with trade, but warned that Britain was strong enough "to maintain her rights and liberties against any who might be rash enough to attack them."

Speaking to Conservative party members in the Lancashire cotton-mill town, the Prime Minister said war materials now were "pouring" out of British factories and added "we may well feel that, to quote from our own Shakespeare: 'Come the three corners of the world in arms, and we shall shock them.'"

Chamberlain toned down his quotation from Shakespeare's King John, however, with the remark "I do not speak these words in any boastful, still less in any aggressive, spirit."

"Our armaments threaten no one, nor have we any thought of anything but friendliness to any people in the world."

Pointing out that Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, is going to Berlin as head of a British trade mission, Chamberlain suggested "the way of trade . . . may turn out to be the best and quickest way of bringing about a better understanding between our two countries."

Armed with his gold-knobbed umbrella and a little red copy of Shakespeare, the Prime Minister hurried north for his speech after a cabinet meeting in which reliable sources said he decided to recognize Nationalist Generalissimo Franco as the legitimate ruler of Spain "by the end of the week."

REBEL RECOGNITION SLATED SATURDAY

'Decisive' Conference With Rebel Foreign Minister To Be Held Today.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—(P)—French and British unconditional recognition of the Spanish nationalist government of Generalissimo Franco was declared today to be "probably" by Saturday.

Senator Leon Barard, semi-official French envoy to Burgos who made the declaration at St. Jean-de-Luz, planned to return to the Spanish nationalist capital tomorrow.

Gomez Jordana, meanwhile, saw Franco in Barcelona. The British representative, Sir Robert M. Hodgson, was in Burgos awaiting his return and Barard had received from the foreign office final instructions for tomorrow's meeting.

Britain and France both have indicated that the recognition talks will concern only the acceptability to Franco of the diplomats London and Paris propose to send to Burgos as ambassadors.

ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 23, 1939.

THE WORK MUST GO ON

There is gratifying reassurance that the program for the less fortunate citizens of Georgia, old and young, so recently inaugurated by the Georgia Department of Public Welfare, will not be allowed to undergo curtailment because of the vigorous and publicity aureoled investigation conducted by the economy committee of the legislature.

This reassurance is found both in the determination of public sentiment, in the purposes and conduct of the legislative committee and in the action of leaders in social work. These leaders are motivated by no political considerations, their whole desire being for the welfare of the greatest possible number of the state's poor, its orphans, its handicapped children, its crippled and diseased citizens and the aged who are financially helpless before the encroachment of the years.

The legislative committee has, actually, uncovered nothing in the operations of any department of the state which could not have been known to anyone who read the official audits, which are public property, open to inspection at any time. There may have been a few political appointments that have not worked out as satisfactorily as hoped. There may, in a few departments, have been more employees than absolutely necessary. But there is no charge of criminal graft, nor of anything secret, hidden from the knowledge of the state.

That economies will result from the investigation is both probable and desirable. It must be made certain, however, that no essential function of the state shall be weakened, least of all that duty which the state, as agent for all citizens, owes to those who must be helped.

A splendid start has been made toward that ideal of social security which is the ultimate objective of the welfare department. Under the direction of Braswell Deen there is every reason to believe that this work will go on to greater effectiveness with the passing months.

There are, it is true, old and deserving people in the state who have not yet received pensions. Pensions that have been paid have not been as generous as had been hoped. But operation of such a system inevitably requires years of effort to properly install and for the adjustment of faults in the system which only show up in operation.

There is every reason to believe that the legislature, with the information at its disposal, can effect worth-while economies and can reform the state's taxation system so that there will be sufficient money for the operation of all these activities everyone wishes to see carried on toward perfection.

With co-operation and wise leadership in the assembly, there is every ground for faith that the fine humanitarian program of the Rivers administration will continue and will steadily expand in effectiveness.

BETWEEN THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP

There is one man within the American economic framework who might be called the in-between worker. He is the poor fellow who, by reason of advancing age, physical handicap or lack of technical skill, or a combination of all three, was the first to be stricken from the industrial payroll when the depression descended upon the country.

Due to these same causes, now greatly aggravated by the passing years, he will be the last man to be taken back, if he is ever taken back, into permanent employment. And, as if to deliberately single him out for special discrimination, the federal work relief agencies long ago set up the rule the unemployable—of which classification he is a part—was strictly a problem for local authorities.

This simply meant that, while the federal government would provide work for the able-bodied, the man with the least ability to shift for himself or to find employment, was thrown on his own. Minimum wage regulations, predicated upon a more or less fixed amount of work, and the in-between's inability to qualify for the job, even if he could get it, further added to his burdens.

Most state, county and city governments, it seems, have been oversold on the reform side. The result has been a constant budgetary nightmare. It is not that the local authorities are less reform conscious nor are they unwilling to go on caring, to the best of their financial ability, for the so-called "unemployables." The pertinent question seems to be, why the distinction in Washington between the able-bodied and the unemployable—the in-between? Is one less worthy of federal aid than the other? Is the in-between to stand permanently—as he has stood for six years—between the devil of unemployment and the deep blue sea of dependency?

CIVIL SERVICE OR POLITICS?

Charges of favoritism to South Carolinians in the Railway Mail Service, at the expense of Georgians in that branch of government work, indicate, if true, a serious condition which should be promptly remedied. For such a condition as that alleged is a direct attack on the efficiency of the civil service system in government employment. If civil service cannot prevent unfairness, it is failing in its purpose. For unfairness involves the giving of appointments not for reasons of capability or even of seniority in service, but solely for political considerations. Which is the very evil civil service is supposed to cure.

Georgians who are substitute clerks in the Atlanta office of the Railway Mail charge that, regardless of ability or seniority ranking, they are being ignored when promotions are made, in favor of substitute clerks from South Carolina. It is stated that Georgians who have been on the substitute list for three years or so, have been passed by, when regular appointments were made, in favor of South Carolinians of only a few months' work as substitutes. This, too, despite the fact that in several individual cases the Georgian ignored has made higher rating in his civil service examinations than the Carolinian favored.

The Georgia clerks assert they only want equality of treatment. They concede that clerks from South Carolina, which has no divisional office, deserve a certain proportion of the posts in the Atlanta office. They argue, however, that the basic rules of civil service, which decree that promotions should be made according to examination ratings and length of service as substitutes, are being violated and declare they are protesting in order to protect the system as well as to win fair treatment for themselves.

There is an important fundamental question involved in the protest of the Georgia clerks, more important than any individual jobs or the apportionment of appointments between different states. That issue is the operation of the civil service system in government employ. If it is to be a success it must be operated upon a basis of seniority and ability alone. If political considerations are allowed to influence appointments to jobs supposedly under civil service rules, whether that political influence is exerted in favor of a section, a state or an individual, civil service is a failure and we might as well revert, frankly and openly, to the long-discarded pork barrel methods of job distribution.

THE HOME EXPOSITION

One of the great markets of the United States lies in the field of small homes. Its richness varies only with the extent to which they are made easily available to the younger people of the nation. This field is the one in which rests the stability of the country, for the larger the percentage of home owners, the greater the interest in the preservation of that home, and with that home, all other homes.

For a period of many years Americans had a tendency toward a large population living in rented quarters, made necessary by the high cost of building and an inability to finance construction reasonably.

This trend has changed sharply over the last six years. Today, as never before, there is an interest in home building. Financing costs have been brought within reason, mortgage payments have been placed on a monthly basis rather than coming due at longer intervals and building costs have been somewhat lowered by greater production and by standardization. "Jerry-built" structures have been largely eliminated by the rigid requirements of the Federal Housing Administration and lending agencies.

But the work already done has been only a start toward the opening of this great field. For that reason there is peculiar significance in the "House of Progress Exposition" to be held at the city auditorium, opening on March 13. Many nebulous plans for home ownership will be crystallized there, and many will learn, for the first time, the ease with which that dream house can be constructed. It is a means to bridge the gap between desire and actuality. It will bring the yeomen in contact with those who hold in their hands the cement for their dreams. Thousands upon thousands of young people will see the exhibits of Atlanta companies which have made the city's homes known the nation over for their beauty, utility and comfort. Out of this exhibition will come thousands of dream homes.

A visit to the city auditorium will be well worth while for all Atlantans, whether home owners or hopefuls. The many advances in home construction and in home equipment will be on display. Many will find that at least one, if not all, of the exhibits will have a message that will make life brighter, happier and less costly.

In the murals proposed for New York subway walls, it is understood that all figures would be smooth-faced, in deference to the mustache-wearers.

Editorial of the Day

EDEN SEES "DIVINE DISCONTENT" HERE

(From The Philadelphia Enquirer.)

Anthony Eden's declaration in the house of commons that Britain should follow the example of the United States in establishing a work-relief system for the aid of the younger unemployed was important for more than one reason.

It marked foreign recognition of the value of such American experiments as the Civilian Conservation Corps, one of the most effective agencies set up in this country to provide training for young men while at the same time alleviating unemployment and the hardships of needy families.

The former British foreign secretary's comparison of the "divine discontent" which he noted in America's efforts to solve the unemployment problem and the "complacency" which he charged to England's idle was apparently well founded. America's problem now is to hasten re-employment before complacent idleness gets its deadly grip on jobless workers. Even so, it is difficult to imagine a substantial number of American unemployed becoming complacently inured to idleness.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

ARANHA GETS ATTENTION WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The advent of Oswaldo Aranha, Brazil's astute and personable minister of foreign affairs, has caused a vast commotion in Washington. The highest officials of the administration are standing on their heads to entertain him. The President has received him with the utmost cordiality, talked with him long, and will talk with him again when the Caribbean maneuvers are over. The general aim is to make Aranha feel that this is a regular home from home.

The motive behind all the commotion is quite obvious. Fascist and particularly German commercial penetration in South America presents a grave problem. Good relations with South American nations are more important than ever. And, quite aside from the fact that everyone likes Aranha, it's to everyone's interest to please him. One question remains, however. What does Aranha want? International relations are conducted on the great law enunciated in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," by Miss Lorelei Lee—"A kiss on the wrist makes you feel very good, but a diamond bracelet lasts forever." Aranha certainly hopes to return to Rio de Janeiro bearing a few diamond bracelets along with his happy memories.

"CREDIT IMPERIALISM" From the friendly scrimmage around Aranha comes the apparently authentic report that what he wants is a $50,000,000 loan to replenish the Brazilian government's supply of foreign exchange, plus ample financing of American exports to Brazil by the Export-Import Bank. If the report is correct, the Aranha requests fit in neatly with what may be described as the policy of "credit imperialism," lately matured by the President and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.

The policy is founded on the theory that, in the struggle for trade and influence abroad, our best weapon is credit, of which we have so much more than competing nations. The policy was half-disclosed a month or so ago, with the White House-approved Treasury announcement that a plan to make direct intergovernmental loans to South American nations was being carefully studied. Since then, Treasury experts have been working on the program, which is understood to include the establishment of a sort of general credit agency, with more direct authorization than the Export-Import Bank, to supply American exporters to South America with the fullest and easiest credit facilities. Meanwhile, the intergovernmental loans are intended to be used simultaneously, to put the South American nations on a better footing as to foreign exchange.

It can be seen why the Aranha requests should prove acceptable. The question remains, of course, as to whether they will be accepted. The President may not see the will in the world to shower Aranha with figurative diamond bracelets, but there is still congress to consider. The Republicans are already making a row about the use of the Export-Import Bank as an instrument of foreign policy. They would surely raise unshrilled hell if the bank embarked on a broad program of Brazilian financing. As for a loan of $50,000,000 to the Brazilian government, it is difficult to see how that could be accomplished without resort to the senate, which would make the whole problem a subject of debate.

THE GREAT QUESTION Before Aranha can get what he wants, there are certain subsidiary questions to be settled, such as the many millions in defaulted Brazilian securities owned by American bondholders. To take care of these, it is said, it has already been suggested that Brazil set aside a small share of its annual revenue for service charges, and make immediate preparations for an attempt to meet its bonds at some time in the future.

Meanwhile, the great question of the wisdom of "credit imperialism" bulks far larger than any other. In England, of course, there would not be a moment's doubt about it. Knowing that it's much cheaper to lend a little money than to build a battleship, the English have been practicing credit imperialism for many years. In this country, on the other hand, due to our unfortunate experiences with foreign lending, all sorts of prejudices and pre-suppositions exist on the subject. It is to be hoped that these prejudices will be forgotten in a realistic effort to see this country's long-term advantage. But the chances are that the hope will be disappointed.

The Story

Of a Story.

It is quite a few years now since the perpetrator of this column tried his hand at pure—or impure—fiction. A decade or two ago, however, like every other newspaperman, I spent too much money on postage for manuscripts sent to all sorts and descriptions of magazines. Chief result was the accumulation of a lot of ponderous policy rejection slips and letters.

Very occasionally, however, I did get one over and probably found more than full reimbursement for stamps and stationery in the checks received. I wasn't, however, anything like just paid, but I found I could use my time and effort more profitably in other ways. So deserted the fields of fiction—at least, known as such.

Everyone who has ever tried to break into the fiction, or non-fiction, magazines has many incidents to tell. Here is an experience of mine, however, that contains several angles I think unusual.

I Said

To the Wife—

It really began when I remarked to the wife, one fair day, that I believed one of the reasons most of my stories didn't sell was that they weren't sexy enough. Not enough raw stuff in 'em, says I. You may be right, says she. So then I declared that the next yarn I wrote would have at least one chapter that would literally curl every prudish hair in America.

I wrote a 12,000-word novelette. It was one of those fantastic things about a human who visited another planet through a time machine. There and his experiences during 10 years of life he put in there. And about the happy chance that brought him back to earth.

And there was, true enough, one chapter I knew was so sexy and not it would barely get past the postal regulations. That chapter, says I to myself, is what will sell the darn thing.

I sent it to what I thought a suitable magazine and, in due course—it came back with a rejection slip.

I wrote thought of a few minor improvements I could make to it," says I to the wife. "I'll make 'em better sending it to any other magazine." So I tossed it in a drawer, to wait until I had time and energy to make the proposed revisions. And promptly forgot about it, while I worked over another yarn.

Three Months

Later.

About three months later I was opening my mail, at home. Some envelopes I recognized as mere advertising letters and most of these were dropped into the waste basket unopened.

One, which bore a return address of some publishing company, I took for granted as a sales letter from a book house. So dropped it in the basket unopened, too. Then something, I don't know what, whispered to my subconscious to open that particular letter. I fished it out of the basket and opened it. Out fell a check. It was for the story I had left in the drawer to await revision, three months before.

The wife had sent it off to another magazine without telling me.

When it was published they had left out the especially sexy chapter, linking the continuity of plot by writing in a couple of paragraphs.

And the letter accompanying the check said they'd like more stories.

So I conceived a couple of ideas, applied them to a plot and wrote another. They returned it with instructions to reduce the length by condensing the opening chapters. I did and sent it back. Then they sent it home once more with the comment that they'd like to publish it if I'd eliminate a couple of ideas. The two on which the entire story depended. So I threw it away in disgust.

Not Worth

The Effort.

For the unknown writer, the fiction field is hardly worth the effort. Yes, I know a few "make" the big-time slick paper mags, but most find a market only in the cheaper pulps. And the work you have to do on a story, editing and changing and revising makes the financial reward mighty small. And the type of magazine you have to sell are not such as to offer much intangible reward in pride of authorship.

As for that story whose sale I have described today—when I saw it in print I thought it terrible, myself. Wondered why on earth they bought it. It seemed much more crude in print than it did in manuscript.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Monday, February 23, 1914:

"Fully twenty-five thousand spectators stood in vicinity of the Candler building Sunday afternoon while nearly every fireman in Atlanta battled furiously with one of the most dangerous down-pour of rain in years which almost completely wrecked the McKee building at James and Peachtree streets, a city landmark."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From the news columns of Saturday, February 23, 1889:

"The rummy line now circles the park. The connection was made yesterday, and Mr. Patterson went around the circle. He was pleased with his ride."

So the Riot

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—It was interesting to watch the Communist riot leaders perform in the crowds around Madison Square Garden during the meeting of Hitler's anti-Americans.

The Communists themselves hold meetings of exactly the same kind, but this was Hitler's night to howl, so they turned out to picket, as they say. Picketing is their preparation for rioting, but they failed because the police were superb and the crowds were, in the main, impartial. A little resentment against both camps the crowds may have been and disgusted because their country must endure brawling between foreign armies or give up its own freedom. The Americans had no clear way to express themselves, but it was possible to catch remarks from noncombatants who stood in doorways out of the swirl and others who were caught in the scuffle on their way to the theaters, or just out for the air as usual.

In Forty-eighth street a chant began, "we demand the right to picket." A few voices at first, then a few more, and presently perhaps as many as 50. The horse cops let them yell until the riot leaders began to press the crowd toward Eighth avenue and the Garden. At a certain point the police moved against them, firmly without tempers, and those in front had to give way. That started pressure toward the rear, and there was some bumping and stumbling as the people ran. A riot leader in a leather jacket ran a short way with the rest, then sensed the pressure had eased and pulled up.

Police

Were Elastic

Like a quarterback in a huddle, he passed the word, "the workers demand the right to the streets. Everybody to the streets." Come on, now." And then, in a loud voice, "the workers demand the right to the streets." A few voices, including some women's voices, took it up, "the workers demand the right to the streets," and the tide set in against the cops once more.

The police were elastic. They let them advance a little, then moved them back. Occasionally they would let through a truck or taxi which, with horn squawking, would cut a swath. The police would like Mussolini's invincible black shirts in their immortal advance to the rear in Spain.

The news pictures of these things, although authentic, give an exaggerated idea of the ferocity of the struggle. If you poke a policeman and he can reach you, he pokes you back, you probably will go down. Some people fall just from losing their footing in a mass movement. That happens in football crowds sometimes, and a couple of customers actually were trampled to death in a minor Guadalajara at a ball game a few years ago as the crowd in the bleachers scurried to escape a summer shower.

Only

To Start Riots

The Communist riot leaders affect the leather or cloth zipper jacket and hatlessness. That is their uniform. An overcoat would encumber a riot leader in running away after promoting a fatal mixup. His mission is only to start the riot, to cue off his squad on their various chants and rules.

The innocent bystanders, or the rank and file in the forward rows, then take the bullets or the blows of the nightstick if the police are undisciplined and panicky, like the Chicago cops at the steel mill. The riot leader then is able to report a successful action with so many dead and so many wounded at the hands of capitalist brutality. They have an unlimited number of lives of innocent bystanders and rank-and-fileers to sacrifice for such victories.

The police of New York receive little credit for their efficiency and composure under conditions that would goad undisciplined men to bloody reprisals. Here they stood between the Communists and the German Bolsheviks, protecting each from the other. The Communists knew that if the police should withdraw abruptly and say, "all right, you want to fight the Nazis, so help yourself," there would be terrible disorder, with killing on both sides.

Didn't Want

To Fight the Nazis.

To Fight

the police to keep them apart. But still they booed the cops and yelled about their rights under a constitution which they and Hitler-Bolsheviks both are trying to destroy. They lie down in the streets, they kick, bite and sometimes spit in the faces of decent Americans cops, but if a cop slaps one with his fist or stick, that is police brutality again.

The jamming and shouting around the meeting of Hitler's Bolsheviks on American soil were not general in the crowd. The disorder was directed by Communist riot leaders with skeleton mobs at their command in the mistaken belief that the throngs of Americans casually on the streets as usual, or drawn to the region by curiosity, would fill in the gaps and take the beatings and bullets.

But the Americans kept their shirts on, so the riot flopped. Somebody is going to catch hell from Moscow about this.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE PATTERN OF AMERICA ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 23.—Yesterday was Washington's birthday. So much has been said of him one feels that perhaps Lincoln was right when he said, in his eulogy:

"Washington's name is the mightiest name on earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty; still mightiest in moral reform. On that name no eulogy is expected. It cannot be. To add brightness to the sun, or glory to the name of Washington, alike is impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe we pronounce the name, and in its naked, deathless splendor, leave it shining on."

So, said Lincoln. No one can quarrel with his statement.

Modern historians have striven to go behind the eulogy a bit and find the man himself. In so doing they have not disturbed the figure. Hamilton wrote the farewell address. Washington changed but a word or so of it. This makes it none the less his document. He had outlined his ideas to Hamilton. Indeed, the two thought almost identically alike.

The farewell address, with its historic advice against entangling alliances with any European power, was a necessary document. There had been a desperate effort to engage the young nation in a war with England. Only Hamilton and Washington had prevented it. The ambassador of the new French republic had come to America; had been lionized and lied on by Jefferson. He had talked too much and the pendulum began to swing. France was seizing American shipping. France was the belligerent nation. The same people who had welcomed the envoy of the new French republic were to march through the streets demanding war with France. The farewell address dealt with the war policy because it was a very vital political problem at the time it was written. Jefferson had sought war with England. Hamilton had prevented it. Already, to Washington's dismay, the two political parties were forming. Already the fight had begun between the Federalists and the anti-Federalists.

The pattern was beginning to form.

PART OF THE FABRIC The real pattern was made during Washington's time. The fight between Hamilton and Jefferson was to set the dye, to make the pattern more apparent.

Washington really started the fabric. Had he not left his farm and gone to the constitutional convention, it would not have remained in session. Had not he and the indefatigable Hamilton fought for it all through the desperate months when many, including Patrick Henry, opposed it, there would have been no constitution. Many of the colonies were ready to return to England.

When they had studied all the constitutions the world had known and worked out the intricate system of checks and balances; when they had worked out the constitution, they submitted it with fear and trembling. Washington and Hamilton wrote letters and articles. One by one the states came in. Massachusetts was the stumbling block. Hamilton alone saved this state, or colony. He did it by his eloquence, his pen and his personal strength.

Over in Paris the American envoy, Thomas Jefferson, began to complain about the lack of guarantees and to prepare the amendments known as the Bill of Rights.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS Senator Bennett Clark made a magnificent address here tonight at the Georgia Press Institute in Athens, speaking of the American press, its duty and its opportunity.

Washington, the first President, set the finest example. Few men were vilified as he. No President of the United States has taken more personal and political abuse from the public and from newspapers than he, the idol of the nation when the revolution was done.

He was denounced as a traitor. His past record was dismissed by the enemy press as a matter of expediency. The hero of the war was called a villain and a thief. A toast was drunk in New York, while congress sat, asking for a speedy death for Washington, the President, and all present drank to it. He was in debt. He had to borrow to keep on serving.

Yet not once did he seek to suppress the newspaper which attacked him most. This was Jefferson's newspaper. All sorts of pamphlets denounced him. He let them have their way. He could, at the time, have done much toward halting them. He chose to stand by the freedom of the press.

He was a stubborn man. When he had made up his mind what course was, in his opinion, the right one, he stuck to it. This infuriated many. Andrew Jackson was to arise in the senate and ask that no expression of regret over the President's withdrawal into private life be included in the senate's acknowledgment of that farewell address. This was but a sample.

Jefferson's paper was to say:

"The man who

"But such a tide as moving seems asleep, Too full for sound or foam . . ."

Throughout the Christian world we decay for want of a faith to make and keep us whole. "Those stalwarts who framed the Constitution of the United States," says the High Point (N. C.) Enterprise in a moving editorial, "were not always calm men, but out in the silent places, beneath the stars, they learned to think profoundly of their responsibility to the Judge of all the earth, in Whom they had implicit faith. That the work of their hands has the test of time is an indication that they had an inner principle which this age may well afford to restate, restore and follow."

It is not through the appearance of some great spiritual leader that the world is going to be restored in spirit. It is through some such phenomenon as the appearance of millions of men and women at church doors tomorrow.

It is through the birth in millions of hearts and souls of a desire for more spiritual living and a hope of more spiritual leadership. Revival must come not like dew from heaven above us but like mist from the tortured sod beneath and around us.

Roger Babson thinks we need a religious revival to bring business prosperity. Thomas F. Woodlock writes in the Wall Street Journal that "the problem of restoring health to the sick organism of human society can be solved in only one way, and it is the spirit of man that must be somehow brought to the task." Mississippi's great poet, William Alexander Percy, says the nation needs another Peter the Hermit or Saint Francis to lead a spiritual revival. Hugh Standard, in the Asheville Citizen, thinks revival must come from the multitudes of men themselves, not from leaders, that it must spring "upward like the sparks from the heart of this man and that one and that one." Walter Lippman, Bernard Shaw, David Lawrence, Franklin Roosevelt and many other men of all walks and ways of intelligence are telling us that intelligence is not enough, that we starve for things which include but are beyond intelligence, that

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

Dr. John D. Mell preached for us at Druid Hills last Sunday morning on "Faith in the Bible as the Inspired Word of God"—a most remarkable sermon—and when he reached the climax of his appeal to the congregation to accept the Bible as our most precious possession, making it the rule and guide for our faith and practice, he told us how he had been taught from his earliest youth to love and revere the Bible, urging all parents to follow the example of his own father and mother in rearing their children in the admonition of the Lord.

"When we would come to the end of dinner together about the table," said Dr. Mell, "my father would beckon to the faithful servant and she would bring the family Bible and put it on the table in front of my father. The servants would come into the dining room and a sacred hush fell upon us all as my father opened the Book to read. When the passage was read, he would push back his chair and kneel, as would my mother and all of the 15 children and the servants, and my father would lead us in prayer."

And then Dr. Mell quoted for us the closing words of his father's prayer—the same close for every prayer every evening: "Our Father, watch over us in the darkness and danger of the night. Give us all refreshing slumber. Permit us to see another morning in health and safety, if consistent with Thy will. Guide and protect us all the days and nights of our lives; and when done with us on earth, hand us to our graves in peace, and at last accept of us above, and the praise and glory shall be Thine, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, now and in the world without end. Amen."

Dr. Mell's father was Dr. Patrick H. Mell, chancellor of the University of Georgia, president of the Southern Baptist convention, president of the Georgia Baptist convention, moderator of the Synodical Baptist Association, pastor of several country churches, and first citizen of Athens—a very busy man—but not too busy to pause with his family at the close of every day for worship, which meant always the reading of the Bible and prayer, frequently taking the time to comment on the Scriptures.

Are we too busy today to read God's Word and pray? Are the things we are doing as important as listening to God and talking to God? Has anything been discovered that can successfully take the place of the family altar? Selah.

Cotton Mather's Card Arrives Without Stamp

The Constitution received a postcard yesterday from the Chilean earthquake zone, mailed by Cotton Mather, Atlanta businessman and inveterate traveler. The card bore no stamp but in the upper right corner was the penciled notation, "At Chillan, earthquake emergency, no stamps." The "stamp" had been marked "OK" in red pencil by a Chilean postal official.

Mather was in Chile when the earthquake struck, and with the help of credentials from The Constitution went into the devastated area and wired back a graphic story of the destruction of property and loss of life. Mailed January 26, Mather's card said that all military and aviation authorities had rendered him every possible assistance, and that he took a six days' supply of bread and water into the earthquake zone.

CORRECT FIGURES ON EGG INSPECTION

Editor Constitution: I will thank you to print the following copy of a letter in your letter column.

WALTER HARRISON,
Millen, Ga.

Honorable W. B. Short,
Buena Vista, Ga.
Dear Mr. Short:

I am taking the liberty of answering your letter directed to The Atlanta Constitution a few days ago, on the matter of egg inspection fees, because of the fact that I feel that you are a man that would like to deal with facts, and would not like to make a mistake.

Referring to Page 3 of the state auditor's report you made the statement that for egg inspection the state paid $285,555.04, but you were in error in this amount because that is the total expense incident to the operation of the State Department of Agriculture, and the figures you use were a recapitulation of all the departmental expenses.

Now, in order to keep the records straight, I desire to quote you the actual expenses incurred in the egg division:

For personal services $6,862.50
For traveling expenses 2,798.85

A total expenditure of $9,661.35 which was paid by the producers of eggs for the said inspections.

I want it understood that I am not upholding Commissioner Roberts nor anyone else, but knowing you, I felt constrained to correct you in your erroneous impression.

WALTER HARRISON,
Jenkins County Member in Legislature.

The Safety Sensation of 1939!

THE NEW Firestone CHAMPION

The Only Tire Made with the NEW SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY and NEW GEAR-GRIP TREAD...

NEVER before in our experience has a tire met with such instant and unanimous approval as the new Firestone Champion Tire. It's the Safety Sensation of 1939! Our customers have started a word-of-mouth campaign that is making this the biggest selling tire we've ever had. Already we are reordering to meet the demand.

The marvelous gripping power of this amazing new tire, so dramatically demonstrated in actual use has swept it to amazing heights of popularity. Motor car manufacturers have been so impressed by its superior performance that they have adopted it for their 1939 models.

Why? Because the Firestone Champion Tire is an entirely new achievement in safety engineering.

Stronger Cord Body. The new Firestone Champion Tire is built by an entirely new method in which each and every component part of the tire is locked and interlocked into a super-safe, inseparable unit of amazing strength. This is accomplished first, by the use of a completely new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to assure cooler running and provide greater strength. Then, the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves, are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping which provides amazingly greater strength. And greater strength means greater safety.

More Non-Skid Mileage. The new Safety-Lock cord construction provides the extra strength needed for the use of the new, thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip tread which delivers remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design—it has more than 3,000 sharp-edged angles which grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and assure a safe stop.

Wherever you travel, you need this extra non-skid safety and blowout protection and you need it NOW! Drive in today and equip your car with a new set of Firestone Champion Tires—the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

Listen to The Voice of Firestone with Richard Crooks, Margaret Speaks and Alfred Wallenstein, Monday evenings over Nationwide N. B. C. Red Network.

SENATOR CLARK CITES DISCRIMINATION AGAINST SOUTH

PRaises PROGRESS MADE IN SECTION DESPITE BURDENS

Missourian Calls for Constant Alertness To Prevent Abrogation of the Bill of Rights.

Full text of Senator Bennett Clark's speech last night before the opening session of the 12th annual meeting of the Georgia Press Institute follows:

It is both an honor and a pleasure for me to have the opportunity of being here this evening to participate in such an occasion. It would be a memorable privilege as a graduate of my own state university to address on any occasion an audience at the first-chaired of all our state universities in the great Empire state of the south. That it should be on the birthday of the greatest of all southerners, as well as the greatest of all Americans, is an added honor. That it should coincide with the beginning of the meeting of the Georgia Press Institute makes it only a more significant occasion. Let me say that while Georgia may have the oldest character of all state universities, Missouri has the oldest department of journalism in the nation. I have frequently boasted that in a certain sense the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri and I are twins—at least to the extent that we entered upon our careers and activities in that great institution on the same day—it, as a department, and I, as a freshman. Parenthetically, I may add that I will cast my vote in the current raging debate as to the integrity of the American press on the first day of the school year in 1941 when my oldest boy, the namesake of my father, will by his own wish enter the Missouri School of Journalism with intent to make the pursuit of that high profession his life career. I could not better express my high estimate of the American system of public schools, topped by our great state universities as well as my opinion of the high aims and great usefulness of the profession of journalism than by the statement of that fact.

CONTRIBUTION OF THE SOUTH

I feel at home in addressing a southern audience at a great southern institution on the anniversary of the birth of that great southern patriot whose memory will always be hallowed as the greatest of our countrymen. Any American from any portion of our far spread republic should feel at home in the south, when he considers the tremendous contribution of the south to the achievement and preservation of our liberties and of the institutions passed on by the fathers which have been the blessing of our country. As a native of the great border state of Missouri, where south meets north, and east meets west, I gratefully acknowledge the debt of my own state and of the nation to the south for its great contributions to our American civilization.

I cannot agree with the views expressed by some—no matter how highly they may be placed—that the south is the "Peck's Bad Boy" of the nation or that its people are, or have ever been, unwilling to participate and co-operate to the fullest extent in any proper measure for the national welfare.

When I was a boy, growing up in a little Missouri town, I knew by heart as nearly every boy did who engaged in the declamation contests of those days, the magnificent address of that great Georgia editor and publicist, Henry W. Grady, entitled "The New South." The opening remarks quoting the immortal of the great Ben Hill still ring in my ears: "There was a south of slavery and secession—that south is dead. There is a south of union and freedom—that south, thank God, is living, breathing, growing every hour."

Those words of the great Ben Hill as amplified with the noble eloquence of Grady, were true. The south has proved its devotion to the Union in war and peace. It preserved its integrity and the integrity of the American form of government under the guns of a hostile soldiery in perhaps the darkest chapter of our national history. In the face of a consistent policy of discrimination against it in economic matters—tariffs, freight rates, even in the present time relief contributions—it has developed and progressed. As the section containing by far the largest percentage of native-born Americans it is and has always been a bulwark in support of the constitution and our liberties.

Today each branch of our national congress met to pay tribute to the memory of the father of his country by solemnly listening to the immortal words of his farewell address. This is well.

The greatness of Washington has only increased with the passage of time since his death. He was loved and revered and trusted by the American people during his lifetime as no other American has ever been and doubtless none ever will be, although during his presidency even he was not spared the bars of factional hate which wounded him deeply and which were as foul as they were unjustified. But alive or dead he held, and will always hold an incomparable position in the hearts of Americans. No king or dictator has ever held the position in the esteem and veneration of the whole world which his great talents and towering character left as a heritage to his fellow-countrymen.

As the great English poet, Lord Byron, so eloquently expressed it: "Where may the wearied eye repose, When gazing on the Great; Where neither guilty glory glows, Nor dispicable state? Yes—one of the first, the last, the best."

The Cincinnati of the West, Whom envy dare not hate, Besought the name of Washington To make me blush; there was but one."

APPRECIATION OF FRANKLIN

Of all of his contemporaries, probably only the great philosopher and patriot, wise old Ben Franklin, truly appreciated what a towering figure Washington would be in the history of the whole world. For he wrote from Paris in 1780:

"Here you would know, and enjoy, what posterity will say of Washington. For a thousand leagues have nearly the same effect with a thousand years."

Washington's public service was as great as the leading citizen and soldier of Virginia long before the Revolution. It was incomparable as the dauntless commander-in-chief of our ragged and starving continental during the struggle for freedom. His services as the first President during the trying formative years of the republic cannot be overestimated. But, to my mind, perhaps our greatest debt of gratitude to the great Virginian is for his absolutely invaluable service as president of the convention which framed our constitution.

If Washington had never lived, some other gallant soldier would have commanded the patriot forces in the inevitable struggle for independence. Once the constitution was adopted some other statesman could doubtless have made an excellent President of the republic. But, except for the towering prestige and great influence of General Washington that majestic instrument, that bulwark of our liberties, the constitution of the United States, could never have been formulated and, if formulated, could never have been adopted. Indeed, it seems clear that but for the certainty that Washington would be the first President under the constitution it could not have been ratified in any event.

That constitution is the mighty fortress of our liberties and of our institutions of government. Today and tomorrow and as long as our government endures, we owe a duty to constantly assert and reassert and maintain and make effective our devotion to those eternal principles of constitutional liberty upon which this government was founded and upon which it has endured.

That "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" is so axiomatically true that it has become trite and has unhappily been for whole periods of our history ignored rather than observed. But a right once compromised is likely to be invaded and a right once successfully invaded is in danger of being permanently lost. The people must be constantly alert to see that the rights guaranteed to every individual under the constitution must be defended at the very threshold of invasion, not particularly for the benefit of that individual alone but for the vital protection of the whole people.

POLITICAL RIGHTS OF MINORITY GROUPS

For, if the constitutional rights of one individual may be violated in one particular, the right of another individual may be violated in another particular and both rights may soon be lost to the whole people. If the rights of a political minority can be subverted, the rights of a religious minority may be destroyed. If the guarantee of freedom of the press could be wiped out, the guarantee of freedom of speech and freedom of religion and of freedom from unlawful arrest soon follow into oblivion. Our protection for all our rights and all the blessings which we enjoy lies in that immortal document—the constitution of the United States.

The bill of rights is the citadel of the rights and liberties which we enjoy under the constitution. Although not a part of the original draft of the great instrument but agreed upon during the process of ratification, it is today the very heart of the constitution itself. It frequently seems to me that we in the United States are so accustomed to the fact that the bill of rights is in the constitution that we are likely to pay too little attention to the pregnant lessons to be learned from the long and bitter struggles on the part of our forefathers by which those liberties were attained and likewise, altogether too little attention to the repeated attempts which have been made from time to time throughout our history to subvert them.

I am glad that in discussing some of the fundamental liberties in our bill of rights, I am privileged to address members of the Georgia Press Institute. This body represents one of the greatest and most influential sections of that great profession whose freedom in the reporting of facts and in the expression of decent opinion is guaranteed by the first article of our bill of rights and which by reason of that guarantee has imposed upon it a moral if not a legal duty to exercise its great power fearlessly, efficiently and fairly.

As our forefathers envisioned a free press as one of the bulwarks of our liberties, so it follows that to properly perform its functions it must likewise be an honest press, a vigilant press, a courageous press and an impartial press in its presentation of facts.

In so far as the press has failed in the past or may fail in the future in fulfilling these obligations, it is to be criticized and stringently condemned. But the experience of the world and contemporary history in other lands teach us that no fault which has ever been charged against the press—neither prejudice nor inefficiency, neither cowardice nor greed for money, neither vindictiveness nor bluntness, nor ignorance, not even corruption—can possibly be so dangerous to the liberties and well-being of any land as the suppression of the freedom of the press. Nothing can be more dangerous to the liberties of any people than to have the press controlled by government, forced to be subservient to officials, appointed perhaps by dictators, as to what facts they may not be permitted to bring to the knowledge of the people, what fables or distortions of fact they must foist upon the public, what opinions they may express, to what vile propaganda they must give utterance, and what proper expressions of opinions and warning on questions of public import they must suppress.

FREEDOM OF PRESS, FREEDOM OF PEOPLE

In every land where dictatorship has reared its ugly head the suppression of the freedom of the press has invariably been one of the most deadly weapons in the destruction of the liberties of the people. The right of free speech has never long survived the right of free expression by the press, and personal liberty or personal rights as to property or life have not long existed after the subjugation of either of the twin rights of freedom of speech and of the press.

It should never be forgotten that while our constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press incidentally inures to the benefit of the press, that it is not its primary purpose. The framers of our Bill of Rights were not concerned with granting a special privilege to one class of citizens. They were asserting and guaranteeing to the whole people a right to an adequate medium of expression and information absolutely uncontrolled. It is in the light of this public interest that the constitutional provision was framed and it was in the light of that primary purpose that the supreme court of the United States has in several cases recently construed it.

In view of some of the recent decisions of that high tribunal involving some of the most precious of the rights guaranteed by the constitution and in view of the various proposals for altering the constitution either by amendment or change in judicial construction brought about by radical and violent changes in the membership of the court with regard to particular issues and litigation, it seems not amiss to discuss some of the more fundamental rights which have been protected by the constitution as construed by our courts.

It is an interesting fact in connection with the history of our institutions, but one frequently overlooked, that the theory of the right of freedom of the press is far older than the right of freedom of speech except as the two were joined together. It was the demand that the public might be informed and might be served by an uncontrolled and unlicensed press to supply not only facts but theories which was the forerunner and genesis of the contention that even the humblest citizen should be permitted to express his free and untrammelled opinion.

sanct nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks; methinks, I see her as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full mid-day beam; purging and unsealing her long abused sight at the fountain of heavenly radiance; while the whole noise of timorous and flocking birds, with those also that love the twilight, flutter about, amazed at what she means, and in their envious gabble would prognosticate a year of sects and schisms." And then with an eloquence seldom equaled in our tongue, Milton exhorted the "Lords and Commons of England" to "consider what nation it is whereof ye are, and whereof ye are the governors; a nation not slow and dull, but of a quick ingenious and piercing spirit; acute to invent, subtle and sinewy to discourse, not beneath the reach of any point that human capacity can soar to." And then he reached the splendid climax: "Give me the liberty to know, to utter and to argue freely according to conscience, above all liberties."

"HORSE AND BUGGY" DAYS OF MILTON

These are the old words of an old man who lived and died long before the "horse and buggy days" of our nation; but upon the wisdom, the courage and the sacrifice of such as he, many of our most vital rights and liberties were founded.

So potent were the arguments of Milton and his followers in the long, bitter struggle which followed for generations that when the time came to frame the American Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the constitution, without the assurance of which the constitution itself could not have been adopted, the guarantee of the freedom of the press was included in the very first amendment.

James Madison introduced into the first congress of the United States the first ten amendments to the constitution which we now know and cherish as the bill of rights. Only eight of the original states had bills of rights in their constitution before adoption of the federal constitution. Some of his provisions Madison took from these constitutions. Some he borrowed from other sources. Some were absolute innovations. It is significant that the bill of rights of each of the states then possessing one contained at least four safeguards of popular liberty, the fruit of long experience—freedom of the press, freedom of religion, trial by jury, and a guarantee against being deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

It is significant that the separate guarantee of the right of freedom of speech, which we now know and cherish, was not mentioned in the bill of rights of any state prior to the adoption of the federal bill of rights. Before the adoption of the federal bill of rights, the provision as to freedom of individual speech amounted only to an immunity against being called to account in any other place, that is to say, in a court, for words spoken on the floor of the legislature.

FAILURE OF SECTION OF THE U. S. PRESS

I might stand here for hours, if your patience were sufficient for you to endure, and tell you where in from my reading of the history of the nation and from a lifetime during much of which I have been close to public affairs of times and instances wherein I think sections of the American press have failed to live up to the obligations morally imposed upon it by its constitutional sanctions. If my opinions as a layman on the subject of newspaper ethics were of any value to you, I could readily explain why as a layman I believe that certain newspapers have failed to live up to their obligations implicit in the guarantee of freedom of expression by exhibitions of venomous partisanship, of activity in propaganda of dubious character, of seeking after profit by sensationalism by the exploitation of the most depraved of human actions. On the other hand, I could more easily recount a splendid sequence of instances wherein the press of the republic down to the present in which the press of the nation as a whole has well and faithfully performed its function of keeping the public advised of developments from which the people could draw their own conclusions, of many instances of outstanding public service by the newspapers of the country, of a general attitude of vigilance and independence which have contrib-

Hines Trial Testimony Ends

Defendant Does Not Take Stand, Although Expected To Do So; Summations Started.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Testimony in the second policy racket conspiracy trial of Tammany District Leader James J. Hines—accused by the state of having acted as the hired political protector of the old Dutch Schultz policy numbers syndicate—was ended today.

Without calling Hines to the stand, the defense abruptly rested in mid-afternoon, and the prosecution followed suit shortly.

The politician's counsel was expected to take all day tomorrow in summations; the state's arguments will follow, and Judge Charles C. Nott Jr., will charge the jury Saturday.

Hines did not testify in the first trial—which ended in a mistrial last fall because Dewey asked a question which the then presiding judge, Ferdinand Pecora, held fatally prejudicial to the defense—but he had been expected to do so this time.

The last major witness of the trial, which began on January 23, was former District Attorney William Copeland Dodge, a Tammany man and predecessor of the present prosecutor, Thomas E. Dewey. Dodge had spent most of the day under Dewey's cross examination.

He acknowledged, in answer to a question, that he had known that "thousands of dollars" for his 1932 campaign had come from Hines, but he had not known that Hines had been expected to do so.

Joseph Kennedy's Son Shivers Here

"Gee, it's cold in the 'sunny south.'" Smilingly, John F. (Jack) Kennedy, second son of Joseph P. Kennedy Sr., United States ambassador to Great Britain, thus commented on Atlanta's current cold wave as he paused briefly yesterday afternoon at Candler airport on his way from New Orleans to New York. Young Kennedy, who spent a couple of days attending the Mardi Gras, sails Saturday for England. He expects to join the American embassy in Paris in the spring.

Jon Capshaw were named by Dewey in a bill of particulars as having been "intimidated or influenced" by Hines to deal softly with the Schultz policy racket.

DIPLOMATIC BREAK HINTED IN GERMANY

'Next Step,' Newspaper Says; Vinson Lashed for Armaments Speech.

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—(UP)—The National Zeitung, continuing the Nazi newspaper barrage aimed at President Roosevelt and the United States generally, today suggested that a rupture in diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States would be the next step in present strained relations.

The newspaper, in a dispatch from New York, said, "Many believe that relations between the United States and Germany have reached the lowest possible point and that the next step will be a rupture of diplomatic and commercial relations. Many observers believe that Roosevelt has this step in mind."

The Boersen Zeitung under a front-page headline reading: "Creators of fear psychology—how Washington prepared a campaign of provocation," declared, "that which is published in the White House will be believed by the people, who are cut off from objective reporting."

Representative Carl Vinson, chairman of the house of representatives naval committee, also came in for a scathing comment. The Nazi official news agency, D. N. B., in a Washington dispatch in reporting his speech during the house armaments debate said, "The greatest idiocy and injustice, of which Vinson speaks, will be found in that country where there is pain in body and soul and hopeless unemployment. That, however, is not in the so-called dictator states."

Hurricane and Visiting Aunt Were Responsible For 'Celebrity Service' Enterprise, Says Blackwell

Atlanta Tells Success of Novel 'Tab's' Profession in Gotham.

By FRANK YOUNG.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(UP)—A hurricane, a visiting aunt and a friend just back from Europe were responsible for celebrity service, a clearing house for information on the New York peregrinations of prominent persons. Co-founder Earl Blackwell, a native of Atlanta, revealed today.

The service keeps track of celebrities and reports on their whereabouts during as many of the 24 hours of the day as possible. For a nominal fee, practically anyone may learn where they are dining, dancing, drinking or staying while in New York. It has been in operation only 10 weeks but already is a thriving business with 500 clients.

Information about Robert Taylor, John Boles and Errol Flynn has been in the greatest demand, Blackwell said.

There are two types of subscribers—social and commercial. The commercial subscribers include advertising agencies, columnists, hotels, airlines, photo services, florists, and press agents. These clients, beside being informed of the whereabouts of celebrities through daily bulletins, may also obtain information about what clubs and restaurants the celebrities are inhabiting at the moment.

"Funny thing," said Blackwell, "many of the social subscribers are members of cafe society who want to know where their friends might be at various times. They can call here at the office, give their account number and get the desired information."

Blackwell and Ted Strong conceived the idea of the service last September. They had been working on a play all summer at Fire Island and had just about completed it when the hurricane came along and washed their cottage and manuscript into the Atlantic ocean.

"On the Town."

It was called "On the Town" and the hurricane certainly put us on the town," Blackwell said. "We didn't know what to do. A couple of days later a friend of mine came back from Europe and wanted me to take her to lunch at some place where she could see a celebrity. I didn't think anything more about celebrities until the following week when Ted's aunt visited him and wanted to go to El Morocco to see some celebrities. That gave us the idea for the service; if our friends wanted to see celebrities there must be many others who also want to see celebrities."

So during October and November they visited every conceivable source of the news they sought and explained their plan. It was enthusiastically received and early in December the boys opened their office with one secretary helping them. Today they have two secretaries, two telephone operators, a sales manager, an assistant and soon will have an office manager.

Rates Set High.

"We have set our rate high enough to discourage autograph seekers and we don't give out information about visiting celebrities who want their whereabouts kept secret," Blackwell said.

He said that plans were being discussed with Postal Telegraph, which also helps to distribute the information to social subscribers here, to open a branch office in Hollywood.

Blackwell, 26, is a graduate of Oglethorpe University. He went to Hollywood as a writer but turned up in the MGM acting school with such classmates as Robert Taylor and Errol Flynn. After appearing in several pictures he came east and collaborated on the play, which is somewhere in the Atlantic, with Strong, 28, who had been a magazine publisher in Cuba for two years.

Oh yes, the success note: Blackwell said that a play called "Celebrity Service" has been written and Paramount bought it last week.

Ballot boxes were forcibly taken from the possession of the court by the soldiers. Taxation was absolutely controlled at the whim of the dictator. Local governments, including that of New Orleans with nearly a third of the population of the state, were either voted out of office or ravished of all authority and left helpless.

Having taken steps to bring the medical and legal profession under his absolute control, Long then proceeded to jam through legislation to effectually destroy the freedom of the press guaranteed by the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of Louisiana. This incursion against the constitution and our liberties was thwarted by the unanimous decision of "Nine Old Men" sitting as the supreme court of the United States.

In that memorable case, I had the honor of being of counsel for those who sought the freedom of the press. I rejoiced in the sweeping unanimous decision, which vindicated that right. But it is long during Lent.

Lenten Fasting Is Denied To WPA Workers by Priest

SAGINAW, Mich., Feb. 22.—(UP)—Father Constantine A. Skrowronski, holding that the WPA workers in his parish are "not engaged in arduous labor," denied them exemption from fast-during Lent.

uted much to the safety and progress of the nation. So we all know that the right of individual speech has been abused during the history of this country by extremists in both radicalism and conservatism who have sought to tear down the very institutions which permitted them their license to express their opinions no matter how erroneous they might be. Nevertheless, the right to free speech has in the long run been one of the most valuable of the rights guaranteed in the constitution and has stood as the strongest bulwark against the possibility of tyranny.

Freedom of religion has been abused in our history but it has been a priceless gift to our nation. The right of trial by jury has resulted in freeing many guilty people but has been the protector of millions of citizens against possible tyrannical aggressions of government against the rights of the people such as we see taking place before our eyes in other countries at the present moment.

Other provisions of the bill of rights and other provisions of the constitution have been as well of benefit. Any of them are subject to change at the will of the people in the manner provided by the constitution. But certainly the question of the desirability of a change in any constitutional provision is not a question to justify the undermining of the authority of the whole constitution by the destruction of the independence of the judicial branch of the government thereby completely wiping out the whole theory of the separation of powers between the branches of the government upon which the constitution rests.

Let me say that I am not one of those who believe that the constitution should be sacrosanct, as immutable as the laws of the Medes and Persians, although I have always believed and still believe, as Gladstone said, that it is the greatest document ever struck off by any group of men at any one time. The framers of the constitution themselves wisely set up explicitly the means whereby the constitution might be changed in any particular by the will of the people. This method is cumbersome and difficult to be sure, purposely made so by the framers of the instrument—but capable as we have recently seen of being amended with amazing rapidity and completeness once the people have made up their minds. It has been demonstrated that it is sufficiently flexible to enable the people to try an experiment in government and if proven unsatisfactory to speedily repair their error. The repeal of the eighteenth amendment was accomplished in less than 10 months after the submission of the twenty-first amendment. With only one exception, none of the latest eight amendments to the constitution required more than two years for ratification and some of them much less.

Indeed, the constitution itself was wisely amended, at least by general agreement by the insertion of the bill of rights before it was even adopted or else it had not been adopted.

It seems to me that the test of whether changes should be made in the constitution should be determined not by reverence for its antiquity but only by the question of whether changes would be in the interest of increasing the happiness and well-being of the people. Thomas Jefferson said: "The only orthodox object of the institution of government is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under its protection." The determination of the question of proposed changes the greatest consideration should be given to the question of whether or not the prospect of success of the proposed change is sufficient to justify its abandoning a system of government under which we have enjoyed a century and a half of amazing progress and of general although by no means universal prosperity.

But as the man whose memory is still revered as "first in the hearts of his countrymen" wisely said in taking his long farewell of the nation he had served so faithfully, "if changes are to be made they should be made by the will of the people according to the orderly processes provided for amendment." In his farewell address George Washington said: "The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the guardian of the public weal against invasions of the others, has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern; some of them in our own country and under our own eyes. To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly over-balance permanent benefit, which the use can at any time yield."

GUARDIANS OF PUBLIC WELFARE

Never was the wisdom of that great man exemplified more than in his insistence upon the preservation of the unique system of reciprocal checks and balance whereby each is made the guardian of the constitution and of the public welfare against invasion by the others.

I wish that every school child in America could be made to commit to memory the majestic words of that great address. I wish that every American citizen could be required to read it again each year on this day. The wisdom of his advice to his countrymen has only been completely demonstrated by the passage of the years. The necessity for the preservation of the bill of rights in its full constitutional vigor, to preserve intact our system of checks and balances between the branches of the federal government, and to maintain the balance between the powers granted by the constitution to the federal government and the rights reserved to the state, is as vital today as on the day that George Washington retired from the presidency.

I would not on any account wish to be understood as holding that progressive development of our constitutional structure. It is not enough that the aims of a president or a congress or a governor or a legislature be excellent and their purposes high and patriotic. Even these things do not justify us in breaking down our constitutional processes. Be it not forgotten that a precedent set by a good president or a good governor or high ideals for good public purposes may be taken advantage of in some future time by a bad president or a mistaken president or one with ulterior motives. But the question is asked, "Do you trust the congress?" (Which, of course, includes all future congresses as well as the present.) I answer in the words of the immortal Jefferson, the author of our bill of rights. "It would be a dangerous delusion if our confidence in the men of our choice should silence our fears for the safety of our rights. Confidence is everywhere the parent of despotism. Free government is founded on jealousy, not on confidence. It is jealousy and not confidence which prescribes limited constitutions to bind down those who would be free. Our constitution is a trust with power. Our constitution has accordingly fixed the limits to which, and no further, our confidence will go. In questions of power, then, let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the constitution. We know both from the history of the world and from observation in our own country that extraordinary powers granted to or assumed by a good legislature or a good executive for beneficent purposes and beneficially used by him may be seized by a bad legislature or a bad executive and made an engine of tyranny.

We have frequently heard it said that it was the custom of the ancient Roman republic in times of danger to appoint a dictator with absolute power as a measure of safety for the republic. I doubt not that there were times when this system worked well but one fateful day there came a bad dictator who did not turn back his extraordinary powers and the Roman republic was no more.

But we need not go back to ancient history for illustrations of the fact that tyranny may be the outgrowth of the breaking down of constitutional safeguards even for good purposes. We have seen in very recent years striking instances of this sort.

The machinery by which Hitler achieved his despotic mastery of Germany was not devised by him. He had neither the means nor the popularity to impose his undisputed will upon the German people. The system of government by decree, in contravention of the German constitution, was devised to meet a temporary economic crisis by an honorable, upright, patriotic German citizen, Hitler's predecessor, Chancellor Brüning. But when Hitler by devious means came into the chancellorship, he proceeded to avail himself of all of the breaches made in the system of constitutional law by Brüning to establish himself as dictator. It was at the time that the German people acquiesced in the benevolent extra-constitutional methods of Brüning that they unwittingly bowed their necks to the chains of Hitler.

In our own country in the recent past in an American state we have witnessed the functioning of what might fairly be classed as a test laboratory for dictatorship. We have seen in an American commonwealth constitutional changes sponsored by a governor of good intentions and not misused by him seized by a man of towering ambition and used by him to destroy every vestige of a republican form of government and establish a dictatorship as complete as that of Mussolini or Hitler—only to be ended by assassination.

DICTATORSHIP OF HUEY LONG

It is not necessary today to discuss the question of whether or not the dictatorship of Huey Long was a benevolent despotism. Many thousands of citizens of Louisiana believed and still believe that it was a dreadful tyranny. The fact which is outstanding is that a constitutional change enacted by his predecessor, Governor Parker, in effect authorizing the legislature to resolve itself into a constitutional convention and adopt constitutional changes without submission to the people was the means by which Long achieved his dictatorship. Nor is it to be disputed that his empire did not become complete until he had brought the judicial as well as the legislative and executive branches of the state under his control.

Once having achieved this control of the courts, Long proceeded to break down every vestige of local self-government in opposition to him. Martial law was declared on the slightest provocation. Registrations and elections were held under the menacing weapons of the military arm of the Board Urges Schools To Remain Open

Thanks Legislators for Resolutions Pledging Funds To Finance Seven Months' Program.

The state board of education yesterday urged all Georgia schools to remain open as the result of house and senate resolutions promising to finance the seven-month school program, Governor Rivers said last night.

The board met in a four-hour session to draft letters to superintendents requesting city and county school boards not to close down as many had threatened.

The Governor said the state board received a report from the house textbook investigating committee and had formally adopted all its suggestions as to book distribution. The board also adopted a resolution thanking the members of the general assembly for promising to finance the school program.

The resolution adopted by the house Tuesday stated:

"Be it resolved: (1) That this body commit itself to the proposition of providing the amount of funds needed to complete a seven months' school term before this body has adjourned this session of the legislature, and

(2) That provision be made as promptly as possible during the session of the legislature to remove the uncertainty of school financing with which the schools of Georgia are now confronted.

(3) That this body officially inform the state board of education of its attitude on the matter of a seven months' school term for the public schools of Georgia and advise the state board of education to inform the city and county boards of what they may expect with reference to a full term of school."

The senate resolution, first read Tuesday, and read again yesterday and adopted, was the same, with the added "be it resolved: That this body indorses the sentiment and purposes of the aforesaid resolution; and that this body pledges itself to co-operate with the house of representatives in carrying out the terms of the aforesaid resolution, thus encouraging the school systems of the state to run the full seven months' term."

3 FULTON BILLS PASS IN SENATE

County Police Pension System Is Included.

Three bills affecting Atlanta and Fulton county were passed yesterday by the senate.

Introduced by Senator C. Everett Millican, the bills would set up a pension system for county policemen; provide a probationary period for officers promoted in the city police and fire departments and provide an appeal period for firemen convicted of rule violations, and annex three small areas, including the John A. White park, to the city of Atlanta.

The bills go to the house for consideration there.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That is, you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk." "Bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

the weekly papers and their editors who make up the real body of the conference.

The weekly papers always have been the real backbone of journalism in any state and Georgia is no exception. No state in the union boasts as many fine weekly papers as does Georgia. The institute is due much credit for this healthy situation. The editors themselves have taken a great pride in their profession and freedom of the press, of which there never has been any restriction but merely a lack of editors to express it does not suffer in Georgia. The editors appreciate and employ that freedom.

At the dinner table tonight one could look around the beautiful candle-lit dining hall and see some of the stalwarts. There was J. Roy McGinty, of Calhoun, called senator by those who know and love him. There was the widely known Albert Hardy, dean of the group, whose Gainesville paper is one of the better known ones in the state. There was Belmont Dennis, who has had a fine success at Covington. Tom Seawell, well known editor of Winder; Billy Suttive, father of Kirk Suttive and editor of the Press at Savannah; W. T. Bacon, whose Madisonian at Madison is a well known paper; Louis Morris, of Hartwell; Otis Brumby, of Marietta's great weekly, and E. A. Caldwell, of Monroe—they were but those to be seen from the speakers' table. There were others present and there will be many more here on the morrow when the weekly papers which publish on Thursday, have been sent to press.

Influence of Papers.

The weekly papers of the nation are making a great comeback in circulation and influence. The weekly editors do a great job in the nation and upon them falls a duty which is as imperative as that which falls on a daily.

They heard the great address of Senator Clark, reported in full in other columns, and they appreciated what he had to say regarding the integrity of the press in America. They applauded the statement that his son had entered a school of journalism, having taken it as his chosen profession, and that he takes in it the name of Champ Clark, his illustrious grandfather, one of the nation's great Democrats. They heard him commend them for their fight for the Constitution of the United States, for the bill of rights and for the fundamental principles of democracy. It was a Washington Day address and it fitted exactly the pattern of government which Washington wished this country to have.

The program tonight was a delightful one. John E. Drewry presided as head of the Henry W. Grady school of journalism. Following the dinner the guests retired to the lecture room.

Andrew Erwin, one of Athens' best-known citizens, entertained for Senator Clark in the afternoon at his home before the dinner at the university.

Hugh J. Rowe, another stalwart of Georgia journalism, gave the welcome address from the Athens newspapers. He spoke for the Banner-Herald, the Times and the university's Red and Black.

Jere Moore responded, getting a great laugh when he said the chairman had asked him to be brief and Mrs. Moore had urged him not to try and be witty.

Leaders Introduced.

Miss Emily Woodward, who founded the institute 12 years ago, was presented, as were Mr. Hardy, Chancellor Emeritus Charles M. Snelling, the present chancellor, S. V. Sanford, and other university figures.

Major Clark Howell, of The Constitution; John Paschal, associate and managing editor of the Journal; Bob McCuen, of the university newspaper, and other editors were presented.

A splendid musical program by the university glee club, under the direction of Hugh Hodgson, was one of the features.

President Harmon Caldwell, of the university, welcomed the editors and presented Senator Clark in a manner most graciously pleasing to the crowd. He closed, saying, "and so we welcome you, Senator Clark, and we would love you if you had not great accomplishments of your own, but came merely as the son of your illustrious father, Champ Clark, whom all Georgians loved."

After the speaking there was a great crush around the senator from Missouri. His speech was not at all political, but it went straight to the heart and intelligence of all present who revere liberty and the constitution which guarantees it. After the speaker had departed, the editors got together in groups in the hotel lobbies, renewing old friendships and preparing for the Thursday program.

WASHINGTON'S NOTE TO JEWS RECALLED

ing your sentiments of its administration, I have rather to express my satisfaction than regret at a circumstance, which demonstrates (upon experiment) your attachment to the former, as well as approbation of the latter.

"I rejoice that a spirit of liberality and philanthropy is much more prevalent than it formerly was among the enlightened nations of the earth, and that your brethren will benefit thereby in proportion as it shall become still more extensive.

"Happily the people of the United States of America have, in many instances, exhibited examples worthy of imitation, the salutary influence of which will doubtless extend much farther if gratefully enjoying those blessings of peace which (under the favor of heaven) have been obtained by fortitude in war, they shall conduct themselves with reverence to the Deity, and charity toward their fellow-creatures.

Spiritual Blessings.

"May the same wonder-working Deity, who long since delivered the Hebrews from their Egyptian oppressors, planted the olive tree of promise land, whose providential agency has lately been conspicuous in establishing this United States as an independent nation, still continue to water them with the dew of heaven, and make the inhabitants of every denomination partake in the temporal and spiritual blessings of that people, whose God is Jehovah."

The letter to Sheftall, who was one of the Revolutionary leaders in Georgia, and whose descendants still live in this state, was printed in the program of the George Washington bicentennial services of the congregation, held February 26, 1932, prior to Hitler's rise to power.

"From Washington's words, there can be little doubt that he would certainly not have been pro-Nazi," said Alexander.

The services in 1932 marked the 200th anniversary of the founding of a Jewish colony in Georgia, under General Oglethorpe, at Savannah. The congregation, founded in 1733 and incorporated in 1791, still functions in that city.

Washington's reply to Sheftall was one of three written to Jewish congregations in America in 1789. The others were to Newport, R. I., and Charleston, S. C., both of which expressed strong principles of religious freedom.

EARL G. WATSON DIES IN FLORIDA

Last Rites Here Today for Ex-Atlantan.

Earl G. Watson, 38, native Atlantan, died Tuesday night in Orlando, Fla., where he had made his home for the last three years.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Miss Edith Watson, and a son, John Watson, all of Orlando, and two brothers, Jess Watson, of Atlanta, and Vernon Watson, of North Carolina.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill with the Rev. L. F. Lowe officiating. Burial will be in Crest Lawn cemetery under the direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.

liberty and freedom for which the United States largely is indebted to Washington, Bullitt said, "We feel these are worth defending and we intend to defend them."

Bullitt cited one of President Roosevelt's recent speeches in which the President said, "All about us are threats of new aggression—military and economic," to which the ambassador added, "The United States, therefore, is rearming."

"In Washington's day the Atlantic and Pacific oceans afforded us almost complete security. Then there was some measure of sanctity in the pledged word and good faith among nations. That no longer always is true. Confronted with changed conditions, we have found it necessary to take measures which we have thought adequate to the defense of that which we hold dear. We are motivated by a passionate desire to defend our institutions."

Will Not Start War.

Bullitt said the United States was happy to be numbered among the nations striving for peace. "We know that we will not start a war with any nation," he said. "We are not in the habit of starting wars."

Toasting Daladier, Bullitt concluded, "I raise my glass to the friendship of the United States and France; friendship which has meant much to both nations in the past and means much in the present. May our friendship serve the establishment of peace on earth."

The French premier saluted President Roosevelt "who is one of the guides of the world's peaceful will and who is showing France so many marks of his affectionate solicitude" and then launched into the international situation.

He declared that France can accept only "peace with honor," cannot accept "any abdication" and never will cede to threat of force, blackmail or trickery.

"France is hostile to the idea of war," he said, "because we know in advance that war cannot provide any permanent solution to the problems facing us. But it is precisely because we think all that that we cannot accept any abdication. Peace and liberty are inseparable possessions for us; we could not pay for one by sacrificing the other."

"Our love for peace is not a sign of weakness or cowardice."

Unity of Frenchmen.

ATLANTA DELEGATES IN PRESS SPOTLIGHT

Henrietta Green Will Preside at Session of Collegiate Group.

Atlanta delegates to the Georgia College Press Association will hold the spotlight tomorrow and Saturday at Athens as student editors from all college publications in Georgia meet in annual convention.

The student convention will be held this year as part of the Georgia Press Association's twelfth annual institute.

Miss Henrietta Green, of Atlanta, will preside over the undergraduate section of the institute. Miss Green, student at the University of Georgia Evening College here, is the first co-ed president of the Collegiate Press Association in its history.

Heading the delegation from the Georgia Evening College will be Miss Helen Davidson, editor of the "Evening Signal," undergraduate weekly. She will be accompanied by Dean Broom, editor of the Junior Collegiate, undergraduate monthly of the Atlanta Junior College.

In the delegation from the University extension center will be Lois Lennard, James McGuire, Amy Dodd, Sam Ledbetter, Lois Dozier and Charlie A. Johnson. Student publications of Oglethorpe, Emory and Georgia Tech also will be represented.

An open forum on "Pertinent Questions of the Day" will be discussed by the student representatives tomorrow. Guest speakers at the banquet tomorrow night will be Lambdin Kay, director of WSB and WAGA, and George Fort Milton, editor of the Chattanooga Times. Kay will be presented by John E. Drewry, director of the Henry Grady School of Journalism and founder of the collegiate association.

Round-Table Discussions.

James C. Seymour, field representative of the Georgia Press Association; Dyar Massey, of the Henry Grady School of Journalism, and James McGuire, of the Georgia Power Company, will lead round-table discussions at the 9:30 o'clock session Saturday morning.

In conjunction with the Georgia Press Institute, the students will hear Dr. George Gallup, of the famous "Gallup Poll," at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning. Dr. Gallup is being presented by The Constitution.

Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution, and Legare Davis, public relations director of the Atlanta Gas Company, will address the group at the closing session Saturday afternoon. Mr. McGill will be introduced by Dr. George Sparks, president of the Georgia Evening College.

Wife of Federal Agent Proves Good Shot, Too

Target practice with her narcotic-agent husband proved time well spent last night for a young mother of four small children. The mother, Mrs. Marvin C. Green, 24, fired two shots at an intruder in the basement of her home at 947 Katherwood drive, S. W. The intruder, felled once by a pistol bullet, escaped through a basement window.

She said she often went to a rifle range with her husband.

threat of force, blackmail or trickery? France will not allow anyone to harm her patrimony, to harm that which was gathered and conquered by Frenchmen's efforts. We are determined to face all threats whenever the fatherland's independence and territorial integrity are involved. That is why we are determined to preserve the units of all Frenchmen and to concentrate all our efforts on the nation's defense."

Daladier said that France, however, is ready to participate in limitation or reduction of armaments. Referring then to Franco-American relations, he said the United States and France stand together in peaceful tasks.

"We do not need to be bound by texts and promises to work for humanity's benefit," he said. "We do not have to assume an undertaking vis-a-vis each other. We already are committed by the sole fact we are serving the same cause of liberty and justice."

To most everyone, the sea's thrilling S. O. S. means "Help is needed now!" That's the same message Nature often tries to convey by means of headaches, biliousness, dullness, coated tongue or bad breath, which are common signs of constipation.

Disregard of these warnings may bring on a host of constipation's other discomforts: sour stomach, belching, loss of appetite or energy, mental dullness.

Trout House To Be Reproduced In Scenes of 'Gone With the Wind'

By Sally Forth.

When the great day arrives for you to see the finished screen production, "Gone With the Wind," you will notice among the ante-bellum landmarks the Trout House, a fashionable Atlanta hotel during the stirring days of the sixties. The famous old building stood at the northeast corner of Decatur and Pryor streets, and was a four-story structure with a wrought-iron balcony running entirely around the second floor.

When the Selznick company began preparations for filming the prize-winning novel, Mrs. Rix Stafford received a letter requesting permission to use the name of her ancestor, Jeremiah Trout. Since she was only a great-great-niece of the gentleman who owned the hotel, Mrs. Stafford could not grant the request, but she referred the film company to Mrs. John Davidson, of Quitman, a granddaughter, who graciously gave the necessary permission. Mrs. Stafford is the granddaughter of Jackson Trout, who lived in Jefferson, Ga.

Mrs. Wilbur Kurtz, who is assisting her artist-husband, Mr. Kurtz, in keeping the scenes for the play authentic and truly southern for the Selznick company, writes enthusiastically from Hollywood, where 40 acres comprise the "Gone With the Wind" lot. In a recent letter to Mrs. Stafford she declared the 40 acres to be the most fascinating place imaginable. Of the ancestral home of the O'Haras, where much of the action of the novel takes place, she said: "Tara is almost completely gone, but it looks just like a substantial Georgia plantation home of well-to-do people, not ornate or beautiful, but—well, the Tara of Margaret Mitchell's book. They've been working months on it, sparing no time or effort to make it right."

"The old depot or car shed," she wrote, "was built from plans made by the architect, E. A. Vincent, in 1854, which Mr. Kurtz found years ago in an old trunk belonging to the late Colonel L. P. Grant." General Sherman burned this car shed, it seems, but the one that replaced it—the one Atlantans will remember—was almost exactly like it, and, according to Mrs. Kurtz, will "spell" Atlanta as perhaps nothing else would.

Continuing, Mrs. Kurtz says: "Aunt Pitty's house is almost up, as are Dr. Meade's and others. Peachtree street and Five Points are being laid out. And the trees! Georgia trees, great giant oaks and pines. Who was it that said 'Only God can make a tree'?" Well, he was wrong. I saw men making them on the 40 acres and could not believe my eyes! The finished product is perfect. I tell you they perform miracles here." In conclusion, the Atlantian writes: "Mr. Kurtz has drawn up plans for a cotton press, too, which will be used as a background. Oh, I could tell you so much, but wait and see the picture. It's going to be great, for they are trying to make it just like the book, which is all that need be said. Just thought you'd like a little peep at things."

The recent appointment of Dr. J. Haden Aldridge, of Montgomery, Ala., to the Interstate Commerce Commission by President Roosevelt, is of particular interest to Georgians, especially Atlantians. The new appointee is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Haden, prominent Atlantians, and bears the name of his uncle. Dr. Aldridge is held in high esteem by his contemporaries, and his appointment is of wide interest to his many friends, both personal and those inherited through Mr. and Mrs. Haden.

A NOVEL form of entertainment will be enjoyed by members of Gamma Kappa sorority of the University System of Georgia Evening College when they attend a "psychopathic party!" The affair takes place this evening at the home of Roberta Sprattlin on Barnett street. A complete silence will be maintained for a half hour after the guests arrive, during which psychopathic waves are expected to provide the sole entertainment.

Present will be Ruby Adams, Corinna Aikens, Joyce Banksdale, Martha Anne Bass, Maxine Brook, Geraldine Camp, Dorothy Carlton, Elizabeth Carlton, Dolores Doster, Merle Holcomb, Josephine Moody, Ruth Puckett, Marie Shealy, Roberta Sprattlin, Frances Stewart, Hazel Thomas, Marion West and Margaret Mary Weymouth.

SALLY has just received news which proves false the old adage, "beautiful, but dumb." Mary Elizabeth Barge, Henrietta Collier and Jeanne Harris, three pretty Atlanta belles, made the dean's list at Sweet Briar College this semester. The honor, you know, signifies an unusually high scholastic average in all subjects.

Mary Elizabeth and Henrietta are members of the senior class and Jeanne is a junior.

Fraternity To Honor Mr. and Mrs. Joice.
The Alpha Sigma Lambda fraternity announces that Mr. and Mrs. J. Maxwell Joice, of New York, will attend a dinner-dance the fraternity has planned for Saturday evening at the Henry Grady hotel.

Mr. Joice is founder and national honorary grand master. The fraternity which he founded November 26, 1915, in Chicago with six young men as a nucleus, now has over 10,000 members, with chapters throughout the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Joice are on a six months' tour of the south in the interests of the New York World's Fair.

Rabun Gap Board.
Executive board of Rabun Gap-Nacoochee Guild meets tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock with Mrs. T. Guy Woolford, president, at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue. Plans for the annual spring meeting of the guild will be made. Mrs. John H. Mullin, chairman of nominating committee, will report.

Officers of the guild are Mrs. T. Guy Woolford, president; Mrs. Dan Plaster, vice president; Mrs. H. T. McKnight, treasurer; W. F. Minnick, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. A. N. Anderson, recording secretary.

Mrs. Samuel Glass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Levine, who was before her recent marriage Miss Florence Levine. The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents on Pullman street by Rabbi Harry H. Epstein, assisted by Rabbi Tobias Geffen. The bride is residing with the bride's parents following their return from a wedding trip.

C. of C. Chapters To Give Program Honoring Atlanta U.D.C. Tuesday

The annual joint program will be given by the Julia Jackson Chapter and Margaret A. Wilson Chapter, Children of the Confederacy, when they entertain the Atlanta Chapter U. D. C. Tuesday afternoon at the chapter house on Juniper street. "Flowers of a Southern Climate," arranged by Mrs. W. B. Richardson, will portray living pictures of some of the most outstanding women of the sixties, with girls from both chapters posing in costumes of that period.

The program will be opened with the minut danced by Louise Clayton and Joy Woodland in costume, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. P. C. Eppelsheimer.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, wife of the president of the Confederacy, will be impersonated by Miss Rebecca Alexander; posing as Miss Winnie Davis will be Miss Sara Holmes; Miss Jacqueline DeLoach will pose as Mrs. Mary Curtis Lee; Mrs. John B. Gordon will be posed by Miss Annette Spinning; Miss Mildred Lewis Rutherford, by Miss Frances Johnston; Mrs. Lula Kendall Rogers will be portrayed by her great-niece, Miss Ann White; Mrs. Joseph E. Brown, wife of Georgia's wartime Governor, will be posed by Miss Betty Ramsey; Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, for whom the Margaret A. Wilson Chapter is named, will be impersonated by Miss Emma Jane Reynolds, president of the chapter; Miss Julia Jackson, daughter of Stonewall Jackson, for whom the Julia Jackson Chapter is named, will be portrayed by Miss Anita Swanson, president of that chapter.

As each "picture" appears Mrs. Richardson will read a short sketch on the activities of the women represented, and old southern airs will be played by Mrs. P. C. Eppelsheimer.

Mrs. G. H. Faust, third vice president of Atlanta Chapter U. D. C., will present Mrs. Belmont Dennis, of Covington, third vice president of the Georgia Division U. D. C.; Mrs. W. B. Richardson, director of the Julia Jackson Chapter Children of the Confederacy; and Mrs. M. Herzberg, director of the Margaret A. Wilson Chapter.

An informal reception will follow the program. Forming the receiving line will be Mrs. Odie Poundstone, president of Atlanta Chapter U. D. C.; Mrs. Belmont Dennis, Mrs. G. H. Faust, Mrs. W. B. Richardson and Mrs. M. Herzberg.

Top-Ranking Cast Will Film Two George Bernard Shaw Stories a Year

Change Your Ways—And Watch the Scales Drop

By Ida Jean Kain.

You can't be set in your ways and lose 15 pounds between now and Easter. What you need is a new set of food habits . . . the kind that will let you get right along slimming down as if it were the most natural thing in the world.

Most excess weight is easily traced to a weakness for the carbohydrates and any well planned reducer's menu operates on the principle of few carbohydrates, fewer fats, and the optimum of the protective foods. Naturally, you miss some of the things you have been eating!

But whenever you have a hunger pang, you will notice that it is accompanied by a vision of strawberry shortcake topped with whipped cream, or steaming mince pie with maybe a slice of cheese on the side. If you were really hungry, any kind of food—even head lettuce with Reducer's Dressing—would seem very delicious.

Fortunately, you don't have these temptations for longer than a week. With most reducers, the appetite begins to behave itself after the first three days. There is an old, threadbare saying and you can get used to anything—and it certainly applies to food. You will find you have a growing appreciation of the foods that make for normal weight.

You don't, necessarily, have to hold yourself to a set of somebody's menus. Let's start with breakfast, usually a catch-as-catch-can meal. Have orange juice, one slice of toast with the butter spread thin so that it doesn't exceed 50 calories, a poached egg and coffee with one teaspoon of sugar and one of cream.

There's a good breakfast! It furnishes the protein you need for strength but no excess fat or starch.

The big change from your habitual luncheon is in leaving out the dessert. This is quite a step for those of you whose luncheon has consisted mainly of dessert. But you have other things . . . clear soup with a cottage cheese salad and buttered roll, or, lean meat, one vegetable, a salad and crisp wafers; or, if you prefer, a meat sandwich made with mustard, a chopped green salad and a glass of skim milk.

Dinner should always consist of a liberal serving of lean meat, fish or fowl, two vegetables, a roll, one part of butter, fruit and skim milk. Those three meals are composed almost wholly of the protective foods and to further assure an optimum of these elements, you should also have daily one Vitamin A, B, D capsule. When you form the habit of eating according to your needs, reducing will become surprisingly easier.

Lady With House
Answers Young Man's Letter

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

Dear Young Man of 25 (who wrote to tell me what he thought of me in not-so-flattering terms. Although actually I was flattered at that for him to consider me worth two whole pages of single-spaced typing. Said he—"I am sitting alone in my law office pounding the keys of a very noisy machine on the last night of 1938, with the intent of making your moments miserable." So I'm twice flattered—it's been quite a time since young men bothered to make me miserable—and on New Year's Eve!)

You say that no one but housewives and marriageable daughters could possibly be interested in my column. Now, pray, who else would you think I'm writing to? I'm delighted if I pick up a stray reader like yourself, but I'm not making a great point about that. It just happens that housewives and housewives-to-be are the people I'm interested in and who I hope are interested in what I have to say.

But wait, dear boy. You, too, should click your heels together, make a bow from the waist and say, "Thank you, mam," for what I'm doing. Because in the end you're due to reap some definite benefits from my ramblings-on. If you're not married now, you probably will be one of these bright days, and life is going to be a lot pleasanter for you if your heart's desire takes on the job of home-making as a profession and feels that there's glamor in housework. Because there is, you know, even if it has been disparaged by comparison with the false glory attached to the girl who trips out and makes a career for herself in business or the arts.

So be grateful that I'm speaking out for the home-woman, and endeavoring to romanticize the job of home-making, to make the housewife realize the future and the possibilities of her work and go at it with the same gusto that you put into your career. For certainly it's a job worth doing well, one in which women can make their greatest contribution to their times. And you, young man of 25, would probably be the first to agree with me that there are few jobs that women hold in business, industry or the professions that couldn't be done better—by men. Whereas here home is the one place that really needs women. I mean intelligent, talented women, too, for the potentialities of home-making as a profession and an art have scarcely even been charted. With modern mechanical help for the routine jobs, we can just begin to do a real job.

Ironically, it would be this moment when the world would decide to snub the whole idea of housework as not being worth an intelligent person's bother. A dangerous attitude, that. And how do I try to counteract it? By just the same means that magazines and movies have built up a glamor picture of the working man. By talking about the things in home-making that are fun, interesting, challenging. By putting the home woman in a becoming frame. By making her day-to-day story a picture worth painting.

Maybe, young man of 25, you won't understand this now. But some day, if you are ever mired down in a household run by a woman who thinks she's being wasted on her job, who apologizes for being "just a housewife" yearning for "something interesting to do," you may remember. And realize that maybe I'm not so silly after all.

Sincerely yours,
LADY WITH A HOUSE.

Wendy Hiller, star of "Pygmalion," is scheduled for film role in two other of George Bernard Shaw's stories.

Director-Producer of Shaw's "Pygmalion" Announces Film Cast for Other Shaw Stories

By FRANK YOUNG.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—(UP)—Formation of a permanent repertory company of top-ranking actors to film two of George Bernard Shaw's plays a year was announced by Gabriel Pascal, who predicted that the Shawian motion pictures would revolutionize the cinema industry in five years.

Pascal, producer and director of the film version of "Pygmalion," one of the outstanding motion pictures of the year, said the company would include Aubrey Smith, Roland Young, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Jean Cardell, Paul Lukas and a "great English star whose name I can't give you now."

"We will have the greatest artistic ensemble ever gathered together to play in these pictures," he said, "and in five years these films will revolutionize the industry because of the ideology behind them."

"These pictures will entertain the audiences but what is more important, they will make them think. Shaw comes nearer the heart of the masses than any other writer—he has a message to give. The movies today have forgotten that people can think."

Pascal exhibited a letter from Shaw in which the Irish playwright said, "My film career depends on you." The short, swarthy director who is the only person

Shaw will permit to film his plays, told of the plan to bring most of the Shawian classics to the screen shortly before he sailed for London to start work on "The Doctor's Dilemma."

He had been in Hollywood for several months to supervise the cutting of "Pygmalion" for American consumption because of censorship.

"In England, the picture is regarded as a classic, and was not subject to censorship, while here the dialogue had to be changed to eliminate hell and damn," he said. "The Hays office also cut out a scene in which the garbage man explains why he is marrying his mistress—it was very important to the story but it was eliminated. I always cry when they do that."

I Shaw, who appeals to an audience's intellect rather than his emotions, has "a childish adoration for America and loves the cinema," despite reports to the contrary, Pascal said.

"Shaw criticized the United States because he loves the country. He is like the man who, when he stops criticizing his wife and treats her politely, no longer loves her."

"Pygmalion" has been a financial success since it opened but Pascal said he didn't care "if the picture or the others make millions. All I want to do is make people happy."

He said that "Pygmalion" was full of symbols and that he was pleased that American audiences recognized and understood many of them.

"You can't bluff Americans," he said.

Pascal said that the interiors, props and clothing used in "Pygmalion" and those to be used in future Shaw pictures are designed "so that they still will be modern 20 years from now."

The third picture scheduled for production is "Major Barbara," in which Wendy Hiller will be featured, he said.

This play about the munition maker is more true to life today than when it was written," Pascal said. "It is great propaganda for peace."

Successful Slam Contract Isn't After-Thought

By Harold Sharpsteen.

While slam bidding is obviously an advanced form of contract bridge, it should not be considered as a separate department of the game, but, rather a logical extension of the underlying principles of bidding carried forward from the opening bid to the final response.

Successful slam contracts seldom develop as an after-thought. The roots extend back to a constructive opening bid and first-round response. Few successful slams can be reached by a hop-step-and-jump, and the success of any slam depends upon a sound opening bid.

MISFITS DANGEROUS.

Too much should not be taken for granted during the bidding. A trump fit is one of the prime essentials in successful slam bidding. A trump fit makes or breaks a jump-forcing response. Lacking the trump fit for partner's opening bid, partner should be aware of a misfit.

Two no-trump forcing jumps are seldom advisable, lacking support for partner's opening suit bid. Game-forcing jump suit takeouts which must be made at the level of three are dangerous undertakings, lacking a fit for partner's bid suit.

MAKES GAME-FORCE.

Assume partner opens one heart. You hold:

(1) S—A 9 D—8 6 5 H—K 10 8 C—A K 10 8 5

With heart support, insuring against a misfit in that suit, you are justified in responding with a game-forcing, slam-invitational jump takeout in three clubs. But, suppose you hold:

(2) S—A 9 D—K 6 5 2 H—5 3 C—A K 10 8 5

ONE-ROUND FORCE.

Lacking a fit for partner's heart suit, a slam is unlikely, even

Grandfather My Day: Of All Shots

By Dr. William Brady.

No telling what any one means when he or she speaks of receiving "shots." Nowadays a thousand and one medicines, hormones or endocrines, bacterins, "vaccines," serums, toxins, antitoxins, vitamins, chemicals and gasses are administered by injection under the skin or into deeper structures (nerves, muscle, veins) or into one or another body cavity.

Some medicines must be administered by subcutaneous or intramuscular injection if at all, due to the impossibility of administration in any other way. There was the woman who developed a wild delirium a few days after the birth of her baby. She fought desperately her family and friends—but kept a tight grip on the baby. Never mind how we finally rescued the baby. Then I prepared a dose of apomorphine. The maniacal patient caught the gleam of the hypodermic syringe as I approached—I was the Devil come to cut her heart out! Having dodged every missile within her reach I finally got near enough to give her the "shot" into the muscle of the leg. In a few minutes she suddenly calmed down, and after a few more minutes she sank back peacefully and took my hand with a happy smile. After recovery, which was complete in a few months, the woman had no recollection of the experience, so her family wisely ignored it too. That was okay by me, except that my fee became involved in the amnesia, and when I tried to collect the good woman regarded me as the Devil redivivus and of course her family could not tell her I really had attended.

Apomorphine is made by heating morphine with acid. It acts as a prompt and efficient emetic primarily, the vomiting being induced by action of the drug on the vomiting center in the medulla. Therefore apomorphine is of great value in the emergency treatment of poisoning when one cannot wait for the uncertain effects of ordinary emetics given by mouth. There is no nausea produced. The secondary effect of apomorphine is relaxation and calm, and so a "shot" of the drug is most efficacious in subduing acute mania, delirium tremens and similar seizures which may endanger the patient and others.

Formerly morphine was virtually the only medicine doctors in general practice administered by hypodermic injection. So the notion grew that if the doctor employed a syringe and needle for administering medicine he was giving "dope." Fifty years ago that was generally true. Today, the chances are about 30 to 1 that medicine so administered is not a narcotic.

In recent years it has become almost a fad to give iron by hypodermic or intramuscular injection in the treatment of anemia. This may be more effective or necessary in certain circumstances, but there is no convincing evidence that iron so administered is more efficacious against anemia than iron in sufficient dose given by mouth.

Morphine is, of course, the grandfather of all "shots." In another talk we shall praise morphine and bless the man who discovered it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Know Your Doctor.

Thank you for your kind suggestion of Dr. . . . who cured me of hydrocele of 15 years' standing without surgery. Please recommend a doctor who treats prostatic obstruction by the method you described, without external wound. (E. D.)

Answer.—The same urologist who treated your hydrocele is skilled in transurethral prostatic resection.

Strange Reticence.

Had inguinal hernia. First doctor urged operation. Second doctor said no operation advisable at my age (65). Third advised only a truss. Wrote you. Consulted doctor you recommended. Had apparently healed oke—no sign of after-effects for several months now. No loss of time from business. Express my appreciation—no great discomfort involved, no loss of time, no hospital bills, less cost. (J. A. H.)

Answer.—Unless you wish to keep it secret, the name and address of the doctor who treated your hernia sufferers in your vicinity. Why suppress it?

NEW YORK CITY.—Miss Esther Lape and I left for Philadelphia yesterday on the 3 o'clock train. I neglected to inquire at what station I was to meet Mr. Morris Llewellyn Cooke, so, as Miss Lape had arranged to meet her sister at the Thirtieth Street station, I calmly stayed on the train and got out there. We found Miss Lape's sister but not Mr. Cooke! I stepped into her car and had a short drive along the river, and then they took me to the hotel. There I found Mr. Cooke and made my apologies for being so careless, for he had gone to meet me at Broad street. I dressed in leisurely fashion and was all ready at 6:45 to go to the Cosmopolitan Club for dinner. This is a charming club, much more homelike than the larger ones I am accustomed to in New York city.

Dr. Gates, of the University of Pennsylvania, sat beside me at dinner and was a most delightful companion, for his interest, like my own, centers in young people.

At 8:30 we were at the Academy of Music, all prepared for the great event, the giving of the annual Bok award. The Quakers are such modest people that it gave me special satisfaction to see two of them honored last night, and to have the work of the American Friends Service Committee eulogized as having served Philadelphia in the "larger sense." Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, who presented the awards to Mr. Rufus Jones and Mr. Clarence Pickett, remarked, before he did so, that the award was being given to a big business, and then he gradually explained that it was not a business conducted for private gain, but the business of saving human beings from want and sorrow, one of the biggest businesses in the world today!

The Philadelphia orchestra played, and Mr. Enesco conducted. They played, for the most part, his own compositions, and I particularly enjoyed the aria in the first composition and the Rumanian rhapsody.

We just caught the 10:35 train for New York city, so my good-byes were brief, but I feel that I would like to congratulate here not only the two recipients of the award, but all the hundreds of workers who carry out the plans so carefully prepared in the office of the American Friends Service Committee. Then I would like to add a word of congratulation to Mrs. Edward Bok and her sons. They must be proud that Mr. Edward Bok had vision enough to establish an award of this kind, which draws such a crowd and sends them all home thinking of what it means to serve humanity along a hundred different lines.

I have had a lesson this morning with Mrs. Elizabeth Von Hesse, who tries in the brief opportunities I occasionally give her, to improve my speaking voice. All I can say is that, if she is successful, I consider her a most extraordinary teacher, for I give her very little opportunity to teach.

Woman's Duty to Children Should Take Precedence

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: A woman never knows when to let well enough alone. I was a widow left with one child and a comfortable little home which I lived in until I met and married a widower who also inherited a home—from his wife. Before many months he thought it would be thrifty to move back to my house and rent his location being more favorable to renting than mine. I agreed and back we went. I kept my position because I didn't want to ask my husband to support a stepchild. And here's the problem. He collects and keeps the rent from his house, lives free in my house so I am really doing much more for him than he does for me. Is that right? What can I do to right it?

SECOND WIFE.

ANSWER:

Of course it's not right by any standard of measurement. There's a bare possibility that your husband might hear to the suggestion that he pay rent for your present domicile and put same in the bank for the education of your little daughter who isn't now an expense to him but, later, may be. Just a bare possibility; for having lived free under your roof, collecting and keeping the income from his home, he'll die hard on ponying up.

However, I'd say that your duty to your little girl takes precedence over any other duty and it's imperative that you manipulate matters in such a way that her future will be provided for, even if it means moving again, back to your husband's home.

As nearly as I am able to observe there aren't many marriages of property-owning widows and widowers where the marital books are in balance. For some reason widows are frequently willing to pay a premium for the privilege of having number two and they don't hesitate to hand over what's in hand, cash or equivalent.

Naturally a wife who inaugurates this policy is pretty much at the mercy of the husband to whom she's paid the premium. If he happens to be a male autocrat who believes that all his wife's possessions are his, the quality of his mercy is strained and she gets the dregs.

Yet, we must sympathize with a wife who assumes that love will loosen her husband's purse strings even as it loosened hers. This is surely the reason why so many women rock along, meekly accepting what's handed out, until one day they wake up to the realization that they are being short-changed, blow the roof off the house and find themselves out in the cold.

Miss Townley, Fiance To Be Feted At Gala Dinner-Dance in Miami

Among prominent social affairs planned for Miss Rosemary Townley and her fiance, George Smith, of Miami Beach, Fla., is the elaborate dinner-dance at which Mrs. Strongman Miller, of Miami Beach, will be hostess on March 7 at her beautiful home on the beach. This affair, which will assemble several hundred members of Miami's social contingent, will be given on the attractive outdoor terrace of Mrs. Miller's magnificent home.

Many other parties have been planned for Miss Townley and her fiance upon the former's arrival in Miami, on Sunday.

On Friday, Mrs. John L. Townley will be hostess at a breakfast and luncheon drive at a trolley car complementing her daughter before her departure for Miami. A group of friends of the popular bride-elect has been invited to call during the afternoon.

An interesting affair of last evening was the spindle party at which Miss Townley entertained at her home on Andrews drive for Miss Josephine Meador and Miss

Tau Beta Phi Club Plans Dinner-Dance At Druid Hills Club

Eta Chapter of Tau Beta Phi sorority will celebrate its ninth anniversary at an annual formal dinner-dance to be given Friday evening at Druid Hills Golf Club. Mrs. Jewell Perry, national president of the Tau Beta Phi sorority, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Bertha Clayton, also of Washington, Mrs. Eva Mathis and Mrs. Alvin Cates will be honor guests at the affair.

An important event of the evening will be the presentation of a chapter by the national president to the new chapter in East Point. Charter members and their escorts will be present at the dinner.

Table decorations will feature the sorority colors, blue and gold. The ballroom will be decorated with blue and yellow flowers and stately palms.

Invitations to the dance have been issued to several hundred members of the younger social contingent.

A novel leadout has been planned by Miss Hazel Rogers, at which time members of the sorority and their dates will be introduced to the guests.

Members of the sorority are Mrs. Phil Dunlap, Misses Doris Turner, Martha Callaway, Iris Kerlin, Sara Adams, Marcia Baker, Anne Bell, Bernice Bennett, Thelma Firestone, Mrs. Marion Hawkins, Miss Nell Herrin, Miss Dorothy Herring, Mrs. Clarke Rodgers, Misses Mildred Rodgers, Hazel Rogers, Virginia Terrell, Mrs. Malissa Upshaw, Misses Martha Whigham, Christine Wing and Marguerite Woolsey.

Members of East Point Chapter are Mrs. Willis Brown, Miss Elsie Bishop, Miss Christine Bishop, Mesdames Keith Damon, Jimmy DuPre, Ray Harris, Misses Cecile Matthews, Gladys Pope, Sallie Ramage and Ruby Stults.

Escorts will be Phil Dunlap, Pat Lindsey, Herbert Senkbeil, Carl Rauschenberg, Claude Smith, Almond Carroll, Lynn Boylen, Joe Rymski, Dean Dreyer, Marion Hawkins, Joe Herring, Ray Weeks, Clarke Rodgers, Jimmie Thurman, Joe Logan, Earle Thornton, Frank Bell, Francis Gregory, Tilden Brooks, Ed Brannen, Joe Wheeler, Joe Shearer, Willis Brown, Basil Cochran, Luther Alverson, Keith Damon, Jimmy DuPre, Ray Harris, Buddy Ramage, J. T. Leon, E. B. Hulston and Clint Adams.

Bout Postponed Till Tonight; Brown, Krieger in Top Shape

All in the Game

by Jack Troy

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—It is really a painless proposition to lay a few herbs on the wrong horse at Hialeah, which would make a perfect setting for color drama with a plot centered around a race track.

Hialeah naturally does not have snow-capped mountains in the background, as does Santa Anita, in California, but Hialeah has an infield that can't be beat for beauty anywhere.

There are palm-dotted islands in a man-made lake, and handsome pink flamingoes by the score add to the beauty.

In addition to the dirt track, there also is a grass oval which circles the lake and occasionally there are races run on it.

It seems strange, indeed, that Hollywood does not copy Hialeah for a track setting, since it is the world's most unique track. It would certainly be an impressive sight done in colors on the screen.

As I started out saying, it is a setting of such beauty, especially when the horses charge from the barrier and straighten out on the course, that certain folks who appreciate beauty don't mind seeing selections trail now and then.

Even the beauty pales, however, when losing becomes a habit. Horse racing is a big thing to the state of Florida from a revenue standpoint.

Hialeah is supported mainly by moneyed visitors. They flock to this winter playground for the purpose of putting herbs in circulation through the medium of horse and dog racing and the night clubs.

The price of admission runs a bit steep, even in the grandstand, at Hialeah, and virtually prohibits small-salaried workers who have no business risking money on the bangtails from indulging.

Horse racing can become an evil when those who can't afford to lose try to beat the odds. But the big feature about Hialeah, as said, is that it is supported, to a large extent, by folks with well-stocked pockets.

TELLING THE TRUTH

The Miami Herald minced no words about the fight in the advance billing today. There was a big spread on Brown and Krieger. The paper used a large cut on the two in fighting pose with the following caption, "Feature Bout 10 Rounds."

Over in a corner there were one-column cuts of Abe Feldman and Tony Galento. This was captioned "Exhibition—10 Rounds."

Seldom has a bout been panned as much as the Galento-Feldman affair. It doesn't seem to make much sense in the cold light of logic.

And with Brown and Krieger going on first tomorrow night, it's a case of the semi-windup being presented after the main bout.

Brown still remains the underdog in the betting and the sentimental choice of the fans. He is a big favorite with local fightgoers, having appeared rather often and always making a good showing.

BULL LEA RESTS

One of the first missions at the track was to call on an old double-crosser, Bull Lea, this corner's choice in last year's Kentucky Derby. The Bull was looking well, but seemed a bit shame-faced, at that.

Bull Lea scored a moral victory here the other day, finishing second to Stagehand. I had sort of hoped to see the Bull in action again, but he was resting.

This also seemed to be true of horses picked on the program, except in the case of T. G. Smith, our pilot, and L. C. Warren. They seemed to have the right idea. For every time a long shot popped up, they were right with him.

WON'T HURT HIS CHANCES

Postponing the fight a night because of unsettled weather conditions won't hurt the chances of Ben Brown, although he was ready and eager to be at Solly Krieger, the middleweight champion.

Ben took in a show tonight and retired early. He is in the finest shape of his career. I hope it doesn't turn out to be like it was the last time a Georgia boy fought a champion down here.

It was several years ago that Joe Knight got his chance against Maxie Rosenbloom. Weather held up the fight for three days. This undoubtedly hurt Knight's chances. The delay didn't mean much to Rosenbloom.

Mumblin Sam Sobel was unfrustrated at the delay. "Ben's going to take him if he has to wait until summer," Sam declared.

NO REFEREE YET

It seems to be a rule down here that the referee cannot be announced except from ringside. No one seems to know whether it will be an impartial third man or one of the "mob's" men.

There has been quite a discussion about it. No one wants to see any Krieger man as the third man. Ben Brown will have enough on his hands fighting the champion.

It is reported in fight circles that the referee probably will be acceptable to both parties, although there has been, as said, a great deal of discussion about it.

Ciencia, Filly, Wins Santa Anita Derby

50,000 See Winner Finish Five Lengths Ahead of Xalapa Crown in $50,000 Race.

SANTA ANITA PARK, LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—(P)—Bowling over favorites and tradition with feminine disdain, Ciencia, a sprightly filly, flashed through the sunlight of Santa Anita park today and captured the fifth running of the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby.

Fifty thousand turf fans saw the filly, sent into the race by the famed King ranch of Texas, kick up her heels in the faces of her male rivals and cross the finish line five lengths in front of Mrs. Bessie Franzheim's Xalapa Crown.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Impound ran third, winner in a photo finish duel for the position with the favorite in the betting rings, W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite.

Ciencia, daughter of Cohort and Science, was the first filly to triumph in the brief history of the Santa Anita three-year-old feature, and Jockey Carroll Bierman received a thunderous ovation when he trotted her into the winner's circle.

The victory was worth $41,850 in added money to Ciencia, while Xalapa Crown won $10,000, Impound $5,000 and the Mite picked up $2,500 fourth-place money.

Fourteen candidates answered the post call.

Ciencia, timed in 1:50 3-5 for the mile and one furlong, paid her backers $19.80, $9 and $5.20. Xalapa Crown paid $11.60 and $6.60, and Impound $3.80.

Ciencia, given a weight allowance of five pounds, saved her strength. She was thirteenth getting away from the barrier, but began to move up at the half-mile pole and at the three-quarter mile. Pounding the stretch, Ciencia burst into the lead with a rush and won the race going away.

It was Xalapa Crown's race most of the way, with Jockey Nick Wall aboard, but a lead of more than a length going down the back stretch faded away before Ciencia's power at the distance. Impound was second.

NATIONAL MEET TO OPEN FRIDAY WITH FOUR TILTS

Spokane Meets Langdale in First Game at 6:15; Warner Plays Saturday.

Four games will open the national Independent Basketball tournament Friday night in the Warren arena with the first game scheduled to start at 6:15 o'clock.

Spokane, Washington's Athletic Round-table team, lifts the curtain on the basketball show opposed by Langdale, Ala., runners-up in the state basketball tournament held at Talladega.

Spokane's team, led by Len Yandle, former Gonzaga ace, is scheduled to arrive in Atlanta tonight. Tom's Lunch, champions of Maine, are scheduled to supply the fire works in the second contest against the Spindale Firemen from Spindale, N. C. "Nig" Lipscomb, former Cracker star, has rejoined Spindale and will be in the lineup against Tom's Friday night.

BISMARCK VS. SYLACAUGA

What is expected to be the feature game of Friday night's card will bring together the Phantoms of Bismarck, N. D., who will be opposed by Sylacauga, Ala. Dallas, Texas, will lower the curtain on the first night's program when their great team, strengthened by the addition of All-American Red Connor, six feet, seven inch center, swings into action against a late entry, either Anderson, S. C., Nehi's Reds, or Chattanooga.

The program will continue Saturday night with four more games starting off with Summit Coals, of Birmingham, champions of the Mid-south Company, facing Brown-Forman Distillers, of Louisville, Ky., in the opening fracas.

ALL-AMERICAN CENTER

The Blue Grass boys will be led into action by their All-American center, Red McCorklin, pronounced one of the greatest players ever turned out in the state of Kentucky. Barrett's Pavers from Trenton, N. J., makes its debut to tournament play in the second game Saturday night against Knoxville, Tenn., a club sponsored by Knoxville's Commercial and Sportsman, Joe McDonald.

An old favorite in Atlanta, the Red Flames of Southern Bleachery and South Carolina's champions, from Taylors, S. C., take on the Masonite Aces, a rugged, hustling crew from Laurel, Miss. The W. A. R. Company, Georgia's champions, go into action in the final game, meeting the Dr. Pepper Giants of Warren, Ark., who come here with a clear record having whipped everything in their section. Sponsor Harris is expecting his Arkansas crew to wade into the finals.

City Basketball

DENTAL COLLEGE WINS. The Atlanta Southern Dental College declared the last half champions of the City League by virtue of a Tuesday night win over the Medics. The Medics were unable to play on Tuesday night, March 2, on the "Y" court. One game will decide the season's champion. The defeated team is the Straussens in the only other game.

DIGNITARIES WATCH 'GREATER AUBURN DAY' GRIDIRON SCRAP

Jack Meagher's Auburn Tigers yesterday put on an intrasquad football game for the benefit of the thousands of alumni who poured into the "Loveliest Village" for "Greater Auburn Day" celebration. Four persons well known as Auburn followers were snapped above by the photographer. They are, left to right, Maurice Bloch, of Selma, president of the Auburn Alumni Association; Mrs. Bloch, Coach Meagher and George Mattison, Birmingham alumni president.

RED DEVIL FACES COWAN TONIGHT

Due to the national basketball tournament being in progress Friday night, the regular weekly wrestling match scheduled for the Warren arena will be held tonight instead.

Red Devil and Glenn Cowan will meet in the headliner, the best two-out-of-three falls winning the match.

Supporting the main go will be Benny Cohen and Red Dugan in the semi-final and Gentleman John Mauldin and Wild Bill Collins in the preliminary.

The preliminary looks to be one of the best matches of the program since both are well known to Atlanta fans and are anxious to settle an old argument between themselves.

Patty Berg Winner In First Match, 4-3

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 22.—(P)—Patty Berg went right along today after yesterday's medalist victory in the annual South Atlantic golf tournament and won her first round match with Mrs. Henry Johnson, New Smyrna, Fla., 4 and 3.

Miss Lillian Wood, Richmond, Va., defeated Mrs. Arthur A. Jones, of New York, 8 and 7. Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, Tenn., beat Mrs. Pearl Stafford, Daytona Beach, 5 and 4. Miss Audrey Powell, Los Angeles, eliminated Mrs. Stanley Woleben, Glenview, Ill., 2 up. Mrs. Freda Nolan, New Castle, Pa., defeated Mrs. Gladys G. Blaisdell, Waterville, Maine, 6 and 4. Miss Laddie Irwin, Lyon, Orlando, beat Miss Elizabeth Wing, Evanston, Ill., 7 and 6. Miss Laddie Irwin, Montclair, N. J., eliminated Mrs. Sargent Tate, St. Augustine, 5 and 4, and Mrs. A. Ward Sumpter, Columbus, Ohio, defeated Mrs. John P. Adriance, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 3 and 2.

Corrigan Connects With Wrong Goal

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., Feb. 22.—(P)—A Henry, Neb., player in an independent teams' tournament dribbled down the floor and scored a basket for the opposing quintet, Sunflower, Neb.

Fans shouted: "Corrigan! They didn't know how right they were!"

The player was Bill Corrigan. P. S.—Henry won, 52 to 19.

Tiger Alumni Get Football Preview

'Greater Auburn Day' Crowd Watches 'Orange' Win; McGowen, Haynsworth, Happer Star.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 22.—Auburn football supporters got a preview of Irish Jack Meagher's 1939 eleven here today as two intrasquad teams played a regular game as a feature of the "Greater Auburn Day" program.

The "Orange" eleven, sparked by the running and passing of Carl Happer and Dick McGowen and the pile-driving of Fullback Charlie Haynsworth, built up a big enough lead in the first half to defeat the "Blues."

Coach Meagher, soft-spoken southern gentleman from Chicago, said after the game his boys "looked all right considering conditions." The "conditions" are the facts that the Auburns have been in training for only three weeks and have been hampered by bad weather.

However, the Tiger boss was pleased by the excellent performance of Francis Riddle, 160-pound halfback, who ripped off large gains with his fast, shifty running.

RIDDLE SURPRISES. "Riddle is the surprise of spring practice," Meagher said. "He has been around for a couple of years but is just now coming into his own."

The orange-clad eleven scored after about five minutes of play on a 91-yard march up the field. McGowen passed 10 yards over the goal to Happer for the score. The drive was featured by the hard line smashes of Haynsworth. A few minutes later Happer passed 50 yards to Sophomore End L. T. Faulk for another touchdown. Haynsworth added the extra point from placement. The final Orange score came when McGowen intercepted Waddie McNair's pass and scampered 15 yards cross the goal line.

That ended the scoring for the Oranges. Two new eleven took the field for the last half and the Blues drove within inches of the Orange goal before a fumble by Ross Dean halted the drive.

However, on the next play, George Wolff and James Samford broke through and spilled Paul Ellis behind his own goal for a safety.

The Auburn team looks slightly larger than usual but doesn't appear to have lost any speed. Coach Meagher, Dell Morgan and company have several key men to replace including Spec Kelly, Pelham Sitz, Osno Smith and Bo Russell.

As usual, Meagher predicted "a pretty good team."

"We'll have a good team," he said, "but so will a lot of others in our league."

The Tiger mentor dispelled any alumni hopes about last season's freshman team, which was called by some as the "greatest Auburn freshman team in history."

"We thought at first we would have a pretty good team," he said. "But as it looks now, it is only ordinary."

The game was part of the program of "Greater Auburn Day," celebrating a vast building program now under way on the campus.

GOVERNOR THERE

Some 2,500 alumni and friends of the institution, including Governor Frank Dixon and many other dignitaries, attended the all-day festivities and braved bitter-cold weather for the football game.

Including in the building program is the construction of a football stadium with a seating capacity of 7,500, which may be increased to 20,000.

So, it appears the traveling Tigers will soon be playing ball in their own lair.

The sporting activities of the day's program ended last night with the Auburn-Tech basketball game.

JACKETS ENTER FLORIDA RELAYS

Smithies To Compete in Prep Division; Meet Set April 1.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Feb. 22.—(P)—Seventeen entries already have been filed for the first annual relays to be sponsored by the University of Florida here April 1, Percy Beard, track coach and director of the relays, said today.

The University of Alabama, Georgia Tech, Auburn, the University of Tampa and the University of Florida are the entries to date in the universities and college divisions, Beard said.

Junior college and freshman entries include the Georgia Tech frosh, University of Florida frosh, St. Petersburg Junior College and Palm Beach Junior College.

High school division entries have been received from Tech High, of Atlanta; Ensley High, of Birmingham; Miami Senior High, Robert E. Lee, of Jacksonville; Daytona Beach, Orlando, Ocala and Palm Beach.

Ace Guard Gabby Greenberg has completely recovered from his shoulder injury, which he rehurt in the last game, and will be ready to start tonight. Ginsberg will be at the other guard, with Browdy center, and the two Kates, Morris and Hyman playing the forward positions.

In recent games the Progressives have showed some of the skill which made them one of the south's standout teams for the past few years. They are not yet clicking as well as last year's aggregation, but they have stronger and more capable reserve strength.

BUCKAROO STILL AMONG LEADERS

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss., Feb. 22.—(P)—Eight pointers sped over the United States Field Trial Club's frozen course here today as the amateur quail championship meeting went into its third day.

But at the end of the day's braces, the performance of Tip's Topsy Top and Lady Norias and the "birdy" races produced by Ichauway Rambling Buckaroo and Mac's Lady Glory continued to dominate the trials.

Buckaroo, handled by Trammell Scott, president of the Southern Association, raked all sections of the course yesterday to turn in 10 bevy finds.

Ichauway's Little Mike, another Scott dog, ran today, finishing with one independent find and another which he shared with the brace, Doctor's Boy-Blue, owned by Homer K. Jones, Memphis.

Nepken Carolina Jake, defending champion, went down in the second morning brace. He produced his only find in the final 10 minutes. Jake is owned and handled by Dr. Wallace F. Vail, Greenwich, Conn.

Five dogs remain to run in the stake which probably will end tomorrow.

Junior College Sextet Beats Sacred Heart

The Atlanta Junior College girls' basketball team won the rubber game in a series of three with the Sacred Heart lassies at the Y court here yesterday afternoon. The final score was 51 to 32.

York, junior college forward, ran away with scoring honors by sinking 35 of her team points. For Sacred Heart Lovett sank 16 markers.

The junior college sextet will see action next against the Druid Hills Independents on the Y. W. C. A. court Friday afternoon at 5:15.

BOTH FIGHTERS CLAIM VICTORY IS 'SURE THING'

Middleweight Match Ranks Above Galento-Feldman 'Exhibition'

By JACK TROY.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 22.—Unsettled weather today caused postponement of the Ben Brown-Solly Krieger and Tony Galento-Abe Feldman fistie program until Thursday night.

Brown, in peak condition, weighed in today at 163 pounds, which is more than he has weighed in some time. Krieger, the world's middleweight champion, tipped the scales at 160 1-2. Both expect to weigh the same tomorrow night. They will meet at approximately 9 o'clock Atlanta time.

BOTH SEE VICTORY

Hymie Caplin, Krieger's manager, said the postponement would work in the champion's favor. "Solly is a veteran of nine years in the ring and the delay won't hurt him. I have an idea it might effect a young fighter like Brown."

Sam Sobel, Ben's manager, violently disagreed, and Ben, himself, only smiled. He repeated what he said yesterday. And that is that he has long yearned to get in a ring with a champion, and that when he does he'll make the most of it.

Chief interest remained in the Brown-Krieger meeting. They are looking upon the Galento-Feldman fight as a minor affair with no importance attached to it.

The non-title bout with Krieger offers Brown the big chance of his career. It easily could be a turning point. If he wins, and the betting odds still are 7 to 5 that he won't, he will get a shot at the title later on.

Cloudy skies and wind were responsible for postponing the fight. There was no rain. But rain threatened. And the Greater Miami Sporting Corporation decided to wait a day for better weather. A crowd in excess of 40,000 is in prospect.

It will be by far the largest Brown has appeared before, and he's ready.

J. P. C. CLASHES WITH MIAMI U.

Coach Harold Bennett's J. P. C. varsity basketball team will be seeking its 17th victory of the season tonight when they tangle with the Miami University quintet on the Pryor street court.

The J. P. C. Cubs battle the Bethel Athletic Club, of Stockbridge, in a preliminary game which is scheduled to start at 7:30.

The Progressives played erratic ball in winning their sixteenth game of the season over the New Orleans Y. M. H. A. team. They looked brilliant for a few minutes, but lapsed into mediocrity for the remainder of the game.

Ace Guard Gabby Greenberg has completely recovered from his shoulder injury, which he rehurt in the last game, and will be ready to start tonight. Ginsberg will be at the other guard, with Browdy center, and the two Kates, Morris and Hyman playing the forward positions.

In recent games the Progressives have showed some of the skill which made them one of the south's standout teams for the past few years. They are not yet clicking as well as last year's aggregation, but they have stronger and more capable reserve strength.

Bob Feller Signs For Reported $17,500

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22.—(P)—The Cleveland Indians announced today Bob Feller had signed a one-year-old major league strike-out champion, had signed a 1939 contract.

Sports writers expressed surprise that Feller signed for about the same as in 1938, or approximately $17,500 plus a percentage in gate receipts. This arrangement was understood to have netted Feller about $20,000 last year. Feller had the highest paid Indian. Feller last year won 17 games and lost 11.

For the first time in the five-year history of the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, a filly won. Yesterday Ciencia gained a smashing victory. She won by five lengths, going away. In second place is Mrs. Bessie Franzheim's Xalapa Crown, in third, A. G. Vanderbilt's Impound, and fourth, W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite, the heavy favorite.

Auburn Beats Tech; Georgia Wins

AUBURN SCORES 11 POINTS BEFORE JACKETS TALLY

Morgan, Edwards Lead Tigers With 14 Points Each; Anderson Has 8

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 22.—Never threatened after building up an 11-0 lead the first seven and a half minutes of play, the Auburn Tigers trounced Georgia Tech, 38-24, here in Alumni gymnasium tonight in winning their sixth Southeastern conference basketball victory of the season against three losses. The game was the final feature of the "Greater Auburn Day" celebration and was witnessed by a capacity audience of close to 2,500.

The Tigers of Coach Ralph Jordan, in trimming Tech to their thirteenth triumph of the year against four setbacks, turned in sparkling exhibitions on both offense and defense. They were paced in the scoring column by their co-captains, Forward Malvern Morgan and Center Tommie Edwards, each with 14 points, and led defensively by one of the south's finest all-around guards, Senior Andrew Curlee, a wise distributor, who very seldom failed in securing the ball off the Jackets' backboard.

22-10 LEAD. Due to the sharp shooting of Morgan and Edwards, Auburn was ahead, 22-10, at half-time and did little more than coast along in out-scoring the Engineers, 16-14, the final half. They took only 41 shots at the baskets, but over a third of this number were fired with perfect range, since 14 of their field goal tries were successful.

Sneaking in for a snowbird, Ray Gibson broke the scoring ice for Auburn a few seconds after the game opened and it seemed that this goal automatically turned Auburn into a "hot" club for the evening. Gibson followed his two-point shot with a successful charity toss and then Edwards and Morgan each caged a couple of field goals to run the Bengals' mark to 11 before Tech dented their stout defense with one of two field goals for the night by Forward Walter Haymons.

TWO FREE THROWS. Acting Captain Junior Anderson sank two free throws for Tech before Auburn scored again, but it was only a short time before the winners launched another offensive marathon to run their lead to 18-4 a few minutes before the half ended. Co-Captain Edwards was the spark of Auburn's assault the final 10 minutes of the opening half.

Mainstays, as usual, for Tech were the veteran guard combination of George Smith and Anderson. Anderson was Tech's high scorer with eight points, two field goals and four successful foul line shots, and Smith was second with six tallies. They were the big guns in an attack that was not impressive a single time during the game.

In a preliminary Auburn's highly-talented freshmen whipped Nesh Redd, of Columbia, 49-25, to rack up their 23rd win of the season against only one loss.

BREAKS CAMP.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 22.—(P)—The Vanguard of the Boston Red Sox spring trainees broke camp here today after two weeks of preliminary conditioning and headed for the regular Sox training camp in Florida.

ABBOTT WILL PILOT SPRINGFIELD

Ex-Cracker To Manage Town Without Pop Ball Since 1934.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 22.—(P)—Spencer Abbott, who has managed minor league baseball clubs from coast to coast, will pilot the Springfield entry in the Eastern league during the coming season. Owner Joseph C. Cambria announced tonight after signing a lease for city-owned Pheon park.

The signing of the lease was a step in the proposed transfer of Cambria's Trenton, N. J., franchise to Springfield. Abbott was manager of the Trenton club for Cambria. Previously he managed clubs in Portland, Ore.; Seattle, Tulsa, Okla.; Atlanta and Reading, Pa. Springfield has been without professional baseball since 1934.

EASY WINNER.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Feb. 22.—(P)—Sam Acheson, of Memphis, Tenn., seven times national champion, won an easy first-round victory over Charles McPeck, Toledo, 21-3 and 21-5, in the national Y. M. C. A. handball tournament here today.

'Towns Was Flying' --- Wolcott

Rice Track Ace Marvels at Georgian's 13.7 for 110-Meter Hurdles.

By TOM MRAE.

Fred Wolcott, probably the world's best 110-meter and 120-yard hurdler now that Spec Towns has retired, paused here between planes yesterday. He was en route to New York to enter the National A. A. U. meets Saturday. Wolcott, a junior at Rice, will compete in the 65-meter hurdles.

It will be the first time he has run on the boards and he is dubious as to his success.

"THROW" ONE. "They tell me the boards will 'throw' one not used to them. That's why I'm going up early—to try to get accustomed to them."

Allan Tolmich who used to be Towns' nemesis indoors, and Roy Staley, the ex-University of Southern California star, will be his chief opposition. "They'll probably beat me," the six-foot blond Texan said. The prediction no doubt was tempered with plenty of modesty.

Wolcott, when he was a freshman, raced Towns twice and lost. However, he is co-holder of the Sugar Bowl record with Spec. Wolcott is faced with a Herculean task in breaking Towns' mark of 13.7 for 110 meters and 120-yard hurdles.

LAUGHS AT IDEA.

He laughed when asked if he thought he could break them. "Thirteen-seven is flying," he said.

Twice this Rice trackster has done 13.9—in the Texas relays last summer. He and Towns are the only two ever to skim the hurdles in under 14 seconds. This is quite a feat, considering Percy Beard's and Weems Baskin's best efforts were 14.2, which made them world champions before Towns came along.

Wolcott is almost a one-man track team. He does the hundred in 9.5, runs the low hurdles, and anchors the relay team.

He hopes to make the 1940 Olympic team.

Cunningham Avenges Loss to John Borican

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—(UP)—

Glen Cunningham, of Peabody, Kas., king of the milers, swept to victory in his specialty tonight before 2,500 fans at the Veterans of Foreign Wars track meet in East Armory.

Cunningham, who holds the world indoor record of 4:04.4, stayed just off the pace until two laps from home. Then he cut loose with a typical power burst and passed Archie San Romani, formerly of Emporia, Kas., Teachers, who had led from the second lap. Cunningham's time was 4:15.5.

John Borican, of the Shore A. C., Elberon, N. J., who defeated Cunningham in the Seton Hall 1,000 Monday night, was fifth and last.

Tommy Deckard, of Bloomingdale, Ind., scored his second straight win over his former Indiana teammate, Don Lash, in the two-mile invitation race.

The Spotlight

By GRANTLAND RICE.
(Copyright, 1938, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

ANOTHER QUESTION BOX.
LOS ANGELES.—Will Dizzy Dean's $185,000 arm be worth a dime to the Cubs this year? How will the Bartell-Mancuso-Lieber for Demaree-Jurges-O'Dea deal work out? Can Johnny Vander Meer master again the stuff he hurled at startled hitters for a while last year?

What of Joe DiMaggio, who may get away to his first clear start as a major leaguer unhampered by holdout or injury? Will K. Hubbell, mail ticket of the Giants for so many seasons, return to winning form with a repaired whip? And if he does, how much help can he expect from Hal Schumacher, who also underwent an operation for an ailing flipper? Can Zeke Bonura hammer in more runs than he can kick in? How will Jimmy Foxx, comeback hero of 1938, rank at the end of another campaign?

How long can Lou Gehrig go on playing day after day in the most amazing streak that a ball player ever launched? Will Bob Feller find and hold the consistency that so far has evaded him? Will Van Mungo finally cash in on the natural ability he has—or remain a flop through 1939? What fate awaits Pie Traynor, who was so badly battered by misfortune as the Cubs rushed on to snatch the pennant from the Pirates in the closing days of last year's race? Will Doc Prothro, Fred Haney and Ray Blades prove to be big league managers? Can Paul Dean know again the form he knew before his pitching arm buckled—or did his work in the Texas league last year mean nothing?

These are a few of the questions that pop up as the major league squads prepare to move to the training camps. Every year brings its questions, of course—questions that can't be answered until the final count has been made as the teams swing under the wire in September. But this year happens to bring more than the usual crop.

The Great Man's Arm.

Ol' Diz seems confident that he can be a winning pitcher again. He hasn't changed his mind since he gave me his classic answer to my question about his arm last year.

"It's all right," he said. "Of course, it ain't what it used to be—but what is?"

But its good enough, he believes, to account for 15 or 20 victories. If it had been that good last season, the Cubs would have won the pennant in a breeze. If it's that good this year, and the rest of the team holds up, Diz may hang another pennant on Phil Wrigley's flag pole.

That Cub-Gut deal also figures as an important factor in the National league race. Lieber doesn't like Bill Terry and if he needs an incentive to play at his best right from the opening bell it would seem that, beginning with this year, he has it. Bartell doesn't dislike Terry, as far as I know, but he didn't like the deal that took him out of the Polo Grounds and there was no love lost between him and Jurgens anyway. So that deal should be worth looking at.

With his two no-hit games in consecutive starts, Vander Meer went right out in front of the pitching parade but fell back later. This year, with the added experience he drew in 1938, he might be a sensation all the way.

Tennessee Crushes Sewanee Five, 44-20

SEWANEE, Tenn., Feb. 22.—(P)—Tennessee went on a scoring spree in the last half here tonight to win a Southeastern conference game from Sewanee, 44 to 20.

The Tigers held the Vols on even terms through most of the first half and the Vols boasted an advantage of only 14 to 9 at the intermission.

BULLDOGS' SUBS GIVE MIAMI FIVE 41-18 SETBACK

Floridians Never Threaten; Dunn High Point Man With 8.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 22.—Georgia's second-string basketball team tonight proved it has power in its own right by contributing over half of the Bulldogs' 41-18 score over Miami University.

After holding down the bench the majority of the season the Red and Black reserves were called upon by Coach Elmer Lampe to open the tilt with the Hurricanes. The starting combination was made up of Bill Martin, Coot Vandiver, Morris McDonald, Knox Eldredge and Jim Gillespie.

The rookies turned on the heat in the opening minutes of play and ran up a 9-0 to 4 count. Coach Lampe called upon his regular performers to take over after the contest had progressed for 12 minutes.

Captain Cecil Kelly and Company held on to the heavy side of the score until the half ended 14 to 6 and then regressed after the rest period to run up a 30-14 advantage in the first 13 minutes of the second half.

Aided by little Frankie Rentz and John Stegeman the subs played the rest of the game without ever being threatened by the Hurricanes.

Dunn, the Miami right forward, was high-point man for the night with eight markings to his credit, while Roy Chatham, Georgia southpaw ace, came in second by chalkup seven points.

LOVE COMES LAST

"Something's Happened To Me That's Never Happened Before," Ford Tells Laura

By JULIA ANNE MOORE.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Life has been very kind to her. Laura Wiley thinks, especially the two years since Andy Cooper came into it. She is successful as a fiction writer, is selling her fiction writings and is able to care for her sister Nina, now 21, who is dependent because of her trouble. Then Bartley Ford, top-rank advertising man, proposes taking over Andy's Newbury agency and making him an executive. Laura does not want to leave Newbury because of Nina and Andy's going would change her whole existence. Then Andy saves Nina from drowning. She goes to his office, kisses him and just as Laura enters says she loves him. Ford finds Laura weeping at her studio desk. Always fearful of Nina's condition, Laura tells Andy she doesn't love him and tells Ford she'd like to try radio in New York, as he had suggested. Andy knowing Laura's motive, says he'll play her game—pretending to love Nina—hoping thus to show Laura she is foolish. But Laura accepts Ford's offer of an executive position in his New York office. Andy battles with a holdup man. Nina is shot in the arm and Andy falls to get Laura on the phone. Ford's valet saying she is out with Ford. Laura has gone with Bart for a week and with Dale Cromwell, prominent in radio and an advertiser to Ford. Laura has been in New York three weeks now and every night Ford has been out. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XV.

Bart said, "Top-flight tenors are always popular and really funny comedians aren't hanging around waiting for jobs. Phillips is right." This was the executive talking. The matter was settled, dismissed. Bart slid from the desk and looked down at her, smiling. "I took the liberty of calling Dale Cromwell this morning. We're driving out after lunch, to be gone until Sunday evening."

Laura thought: I wish he hadn't. If a letter comes from Nina, I shan't get it until Monday morning. But she said, "I'll need a little time to pack a bag, Bart." He nodded. "We're going to lunch immediately. Then you take a cab to your place and I'll pick you up about five. You'll enjoy it at Dale, Laura, and real people. I don't know how else will be there, but they'll measure up. His guests always do. Clear the decks now, and get your hat. I'll be back in three seconds." He turned toward the door, suddenly swung around. "I almost forgot to tell you. I had a letter from Cooper. He's opening the branch office in Bridgehaven Monday."

Laura's heart jumped. She thought: "I'll write Nina to come to New York at once. She couldn't have gotten very far with Andy in three weeks and I'll see that she doesn't get any further. I'll give her a new mood."

Laura's sun was shining again. If, far back in her consciousness a faint shadow of fear remained, it was no longer important. But when you can forget it hours on end—when you can laugh and really feel like laughing and want to go on laughing—the little fear doesn't matter.

Frankly she had realized the change that had come over her. As vividly as if she had been there to watch the process with her own eyes, she had seen Nina passing through that emotional experience she called love. She had seen her losing the first fine rapture, gradually coming to the realization that nothing was ever to be permanent for her, not even this thing she felt for Andy which had stirred her so deeply a few weeks ago. And then, with her vision no longer distorted, Nina had understood at last that Andy had never loved her. That hurt her pride a little, but not very much, and by now she would be looking for a new interest, a new thrill, a new stimulus for her emotion.

Laura, deep in the seat beside Bart, thought as they rode through the gathering twilight: I'll write her while we're here and enclose a check. I'll bring her to New York and give her the maddest whirl a girl ever had and with Bart's help I'll have her meet every attractive young man of Manhattan.

And what of Andy? . . . she did not know precisely how she would find her way back to Andy to whom she had said not so very long ago: "There have been times when I thought I loved you, but I know now I never did and never will." But knowing Andy, she was confident he would not make it difficult for her. Dear, dear Andy. . .

It was quite dark when they turned into the winding drive. Lighted windows popped out of the night and they heard the infectious laughter of young voices. "Sounds like a real party," Laura said.

"It's always a party here," Bart declared. "Hannah's responsible for that, of course."

"Hannah is Cromwell's daughter?"

"Yes. She's a good kid, but she doesn't know the meaning of restraint. What she wants, she takes. And she usually wants a gay crowd around her. If they get in your hair, step on them."

"But they won't," Laura smiled. "I'm in a rather gay mood myself."

He looked at her as they drew up before the door. "Good," he said. "I thought I sensed it."

Something in your eyes—something that makes me think that in your present mood I could kiss you and get away with it."

The car came to a stop. Laura said, laughing, "I'm sure you could, but would it be worth the trouble?"

"No trouble at all," he said. "You see—" he pulled up the emergency brake and shut off the motor—"it would be a simple matter of turning toward you, like this—putting an arm around you, like this—lifting you chin, and—"

The door opened and a servant came down the steps. Bart sat up, flushing. Laura tried not to laugh, but she couldn't help it. "There's many a slip," she teased. "And think of the time you wasted while you were driving out from the city."

"I'd rather," Bart said, "think of the time I've no intention of wasting before we drive back to the city."

Dale Cromwell greeted them cordially. "Get the feel of the place if you can," he said to Laura, "because I expect you and Bart to make frequent use of it while the summer lasts."

She had the feel of it already, of the big house and all that lay around it. It represented a fortune and the combined efforts of competent architects and interior decorators and landscape engineers and heaven only knew how many other specialists—and yet it managed, in spite of all this, a pleasing simplicity that made it a comfortable home.

A maid led the way up the broad stairway and along the hall to a large corner room in what the maid informed Laura, was the east wing. Her bags were already there. "I'll manage now, thank you," Laura said. When the maid had gone, she stood in the center of the room, taking in every tiny detail. It was lovely, a dream bedroom materialized.

Bart and Dale were in the hall when she went downstairs and together they entered the big living room—where some half-dozen persons were collected around a table, poised, intelligent, middle-aged persons for the most part. When she came near the table, Laura saw that they were playing Michigan.

Laura was introduced. Bart apparently knew them all. There was ill-concealed amusement in their faces when they spoke to him. They might as well have said, aloud, "Well, old boy, you've succumbed at last."

Bart pulled up a chair and sat down to watch the game. Dale said, "The first-graders are in the swimming pool, Miss Wiley. Shall we go out and tell them it's time to get dressed for dinner?"

They went out the front entry and followed a gravel walk around to the back of the house and Laura suddenly knew whence had come the bursts of laughter she and Bart heard. Floodlights illuminated a tiled pool in which three faces looked up at a slender girl poised on the end of a diving board some 15 feet above the water. The girl wore a bright red swimming suit and a red cap which, in a moment, became a fluid crimson streak as she lifted from the board in a daring double somersault and shot beneath the surface of the water with hardly a ripple to mark the spot.

Laura caught her breath. It was not the trick so much as the girl's superb control of her slim body that had thrilled her. They came to the edge of the pool as the red cap emerged and Dale called, "Hannah, just a moment, dear!"

The girl came from the middle of the pool with strong, measured strokes, climbed out with no apparent effort and stood dripping before them.

"Miss Wiley, this is Hannah, my daughter. . . Miss Wiley, Hannah."

"Oh, yes," Hannah said. She had her father's round face, a confident, deeply-tanned face with small dark eyes that looked at Laura with evident curiosity. She pulled the cap from her head and shook out her dark hair, cut in a shoulder-length bob. She said, "How are you, Miss Wiley—where's Bart?" It was one question, asked in a single breath.

"Kabatizing at Michigan," Laura said. "Where did you learn to dive like that, Hannah?"

Hannah was looking at her, steadily. When the question penetrated, she said with a slight shrug, "I grew up in water."

"And she is not as good as she thinks she is," Dale said.

The girl looked at her father and her expression softened. The change was so marked that it was only then Laura realized how hard the small mouth had been a moment before.

"You taught me all I know," Hannah smiled, "and you've always thought you were pretty good."

Two boys and a girl came out of the pool and were introduced. Then Dale said, "Time to get dressed for dinner. Come along, now."

Laura found Hannah's gaze fastened upon her. Had the girl taken a dislike to her, she wondered. And if so, why? She was curious, but not troubled. After all, when this week end was over, she would probably never see the girl again.

She dismissed the question and did not think of it again until hours later when, returning from the beach where they had all sat around a fire singing, she discovered Hannah walking beside her.

BIG MONEY BILL VOTED BY SENATE

$1,898,000,000 Appropriation Goes Back to House for Agreement on TVA.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—With a quick crack of his gavel Vice President Garner pushed a $1,898,000,000 appropriations bill through the senate today and sent it back to the house.

The measure contained funds to operate nearly 40 federal agencies during the next fiscal year ending June 30, 1940. The chief reason for returning it to the house was to obtain agreement on items totaling $17,206,000 to continue construction of dams by the Tennessee Valley Authority. These were inserted by the senate after the house had rejected them.

Administration supporters won a victory in the senate on the TVA issue when the chamber refused by a 49-33 vote to strike a $4,252,000 fund to begin building the Watts Bar dam on the Tennessee river.

Only Record Vote.

This test was the only record vote in the senate on the huge appropriation measure.

With the TVA matter out of the way there was practically no disagreement.

Vice President Garner named the following senators to adjust differences in the bill with a house committee: Glass, Democrat, Virginia; Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina; Russell, Democrat, Georgia; Adams, Democrat, Colorado; McCarran, Democrat, Nevada; Hale, Republican, Maine; and Townsend, Republican, Delaware.

The senate struck from the bill a passage authorizing the Federal Housing Administration to use $2,500,000 of next fiscal year's funds to meet pay rolls this year.

Some senators contended this was a violation of the budget law although FHA officials had contended that expansion of their duties had increased expenses and threatened to deprive hundreds of employees of their salaries from March 1 to June 30.

Smart Part of Total.

Although the senate controversy centered around the TVA, with a total appropriation of $39,003,000, this item was only a small portion of the total.

Largest appropriations were for the veterans' administration, $581,093,000; Social Security Board, $350,000,000; Maritime Commission, $100,000,000 and authorization to contract up to $250,000,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, $295,000,000; railroad retirement board, $123,404,000; Civil Service Commission, $91,404,000; and Rural Electrification Administration, $42,790,000.

Other appropriations included: Federal Power Commission, $2,715,000; Federal Trade Commission, $2,324,000; general accounting office, $3,306,540; Interstate Commerce Commission, $8,000,000; National Labor Relations Board, $3,189,600; Securities and Exchange Commission, $3,370,000; Home Owners' Loan Corporation, $24,500,000; Public Works Administration, $20,000,000; and Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $9,250,000; and Civil Aeronautics Authority, $21,218,000.

FINANCE COMMITTEE FAVOR TAXES ON PAY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—(P)—A bill to abolish tax exemptions on all salaries drawn from public treasuries was approved by the senate finance committee today, 14 to 3, although members said its constitutionality might be open to question.

Already approved by the house, the measure would apply federal income tax laws to state and local employees, and consent to state taxation of federal salaries. President Roosevelt has recommended such action.

Senator Brown, Democrat, Michigan, who has been commissioned to write the committee's formal report on the legislation, said members wanted a "clear cut determination" of the issue by the supreme court. Brown said that the report would express the opinion that there was some doubt whether the supreme court would uphold the legislation.

Senators King, Democrat, Utah; Bailey, Democrat, North Carolina; and Radcliffe, Democrat, Maryland, voted against the bill in committee.

Voting for it were Chairman Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi; and Senators George, Democrat, Georgia; Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts; Clark, Democrat, Missouri; Byrd, Democrat, Virginia; Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania; Brown, Herring, Democrat, Iowa; Johnson, Democrat, Colorado; La Follette, Progressive, Wisconsin; Capper, Republican, Kansas; Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan; Townsend, Republican, Delaware; and Davis, Republican, Pennsylvania.

LAKES-TO-GULF ROAD WILL OPEN

U. S. Highway 61 Ceremonies Tomorrow.

VICKSBURG, Miss., Feb. 22.—(P)—The "Old Man River Trail," an 1,800-mile paved highway running from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, officially will be opened south of here Friday.

Governor Hugh White, of Mississippi, assisted by Governors Richard W. Leche, of Louisiana, and Prentice W. Cooper, of Tennessee, or their representatives, will blend waters of Lake Superior, the Gulf of Mexico and the Mississippi river, symbolizing the bringing together of the three streams by the highway.

After a luncheon and the formal dedication ceremonies, motorcades made up of delegates from surrounding states and Mississippians, are to proceed south over the highway to Natchez, where a banquet and celebration will be held Friday night.

News of Gate City Told in Briefs

Atlanta City Salesmen's Association will hold its 42d annual election of officers at 7:30 tomorrow night in the Henry Grady hotel. Walter L. Richard, president, will preside. The Association was founded in 1896 to promote a better understanding between Atlanta buyers and salesmen.

W. James Knight, of Atlanta, a junior at Columbia University, in New York, has been appointed a member of the program committee for the university's annual junior prom. Knight is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and served as chairman of the floor committee for the 1939 Spector Shambles.

Fifth district commanders and adjutants of the American Legion will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the Legion Hall, 1071 Piedmont avenue, to make plans for the state convention to be held in Atlanta, in June.

Score of guests were routed from their beds early yesterday morning when a slight fire broke out in the restaurant on the ground floor of the Atlanta hotel. Damage, mainly from smoke, was estimated at between $250 and $500. The blaze was confined to the restaurant and quickly extinguished. The fire started under a coffee urn, it was reported.

Fellowship class of East Lake Tabernacle will sponsor a special musical program at 8 o'clock tomorrow night at the tabernacle, Raymond I. Reed, president, announced. Among those on the program are Fitzhugh Crain, concert singer; Mrs. Edward K. Hardy, violinist; Miss Eunice Hardy, soloist; Herbert Schlitter Jr., trumpeter; E. D. Allain, Edgar Long and Renard Langley.

Child Welfare Society will meet at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at 779 Juniper street. Dr. Robert W. Burns will preside, while short talks will be made by Mrs. C. E. Harrison, Mrs. Robert Greer and E. H. Rece.

Atlanta City Salesmen's Association will elect officers for the year at a meeting at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the Henry Grady hotel.

Directors of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors' Bureau will meet today at the Piedmont hotel. A. L. Belle Isle, president, announced he will appoint committees for the year.

COMMITTEE OKAYS IMPEACHMENT VOTE

Body Sends Woodrum Resolution to House for Second Time.

A house committee voted yesterday for preparation of impeachment articles against Judge William Woodrum, of the Ogeechee superior court circuit.

Meeting in executive session, the vote of the republic committee, 12 to 11, to approve a resolution asking the jurist's impeachment for "high crimes and misdemeanors" in office.

The same committee previously had voted 8 to 7 for the resolution only to have the house refer the matter back for further consideration, on the ground Judge Woodrum side of the case had been inadequately presented.

The judge did not appear before the committee yesterday.

Should the house of representatives adopt the resolution, articles of impeachment would be prepared by the state senate with Chief Justice Charles Reid, of the state supreme court, presiding. Conviction by the senate would remove him from office.

TALMADGE FACES TRAFFIC CHARGES

Accused of Disregarding Stop Sign.

Former Governor Eugene Talmadge is scheduled for an appearance in recorder's court at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, to answer charges of driving an automobile without a driver's license and disregarding a stop sign.

He was ordered to appear in court by Radio Patrolmen Rhodes and Varnum, who reported Talmadge ignored a stop sign at Piedmont and Auburn avenues. Talmadge said he "left his license in another suit."

MUSSOLINI, FRANCO EXCHANGE GREETINGS

ROME, Feb. 22.—(P)—Premier Mussolini told Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain today that Italian Legionnaires are at your orders until final victory.

Il Duce telegraphed his assurance in acknowledgment of greetings from the Nationalist leader on the occasion of a big military review in Barcelona, former government capital.

General Franco messaged Mussolini that "the Spanish people acclaimed Italy and her Duce," and Il Duce replied "I return your greetings with great cordiality, confirming that the Italian Legionnaires are at your orders until final victory."

ELKS WILL INITIATE CLASS OF 84 TONIGHT

Atlanta Lodge No. 78, B. P. O. E., will initiate a class of 84 candidates at 8 o'clock tonight at the Biltmore hotel, the class to be known as the McCormick-American class.

Conducting the initial ceremony will be Frank Fling, grand exalted ruler, and other officers. Following the ceremony a buffet supper will be held at the Elks lodge.

He's Voted Third Term L. C. HOWELL DIES AT WHEEL OF AUTO

Suffers Heart Attack After Dining With Friend.

L. C. Howell, 55, of a Riverdale road address, was found dead last night in his automobile in a parking lot at the Hunter street viaduct near Forsyth street. Death was attributed to heart failure.

According to police, Howell had dined with a companion, O. L. Brown, of 1608 Evans drive, at a lunch room at Broad and Hunter streets at 7:30 o'clock. Following the meal, Howell left his companion to get his automobile. When the former failed to appear, Brown investigated and found Howell slumped over the wheel of his machine.

He was taken to Grady hospital where physicians pronounced him dead.

NELSON SENTENCED TO DIE ON MARCH 10

New Death Date Set After High Court Refusal of New Trial.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Feb. 22.—(P)—Harvey Nelson, inn-keeper convicted in the death of his 12-year-old son at a trial in which he testified two waitresses drew straws to determine who would shoot the boy, today was resented to die in the electric chair March 10.

Judge M. D. Dickerson set the new execution date following refusal of the state supreme court Monday to grant a new trial.

The defendant was nervous as he stood before Judge Dickerson. "I'm not guilty of killing my son," he told the court. "I just got messed up in this case."

Nelson was convicted last May. He testified Verna Mae Fowler and another waitress in his establishment carried out a plot to shoot the boy for $900 insurance. Miss Fowler was convicted and given a life term, and the other waitress was released. Solicitor General John Gibson announcing there was insufficient evidence to warrant holding her.

Later defense attorneys for the waitresses announced they had a sworn statement from Nelson taking the blame for the shooting and claiming it was accidental.

TARZAN AND THE ELEPHANT MEN No. 112

Directing Valthor to follow, fearless Tarzan and his elephant men, the warrior, for they were trained to trample the foe.
Once Valthor was near death from those pounding heels, but Tarzan saved him. The more apple, he began to slash the girls that held the howdahs. The Athean warriors atop the beasts tumbled to the ground.
